LET THE Good Times Roll

Overcoming adversity. Future generations will look at 1988 as the year when we faced overwhelming odds and didn't blink.

Even though tough economic times reduced our school population to just over 1,400, we remained in 5A and held our own against schools twice our size. Our volleyball girls became the first team to go to playoffs in 5A, and other sports hovered around the top in district rankings.

When our faculty was reduced by eight teachers and class size increased, we still managed to place in the top 25% statewide in academics based on the TEAMS scores.

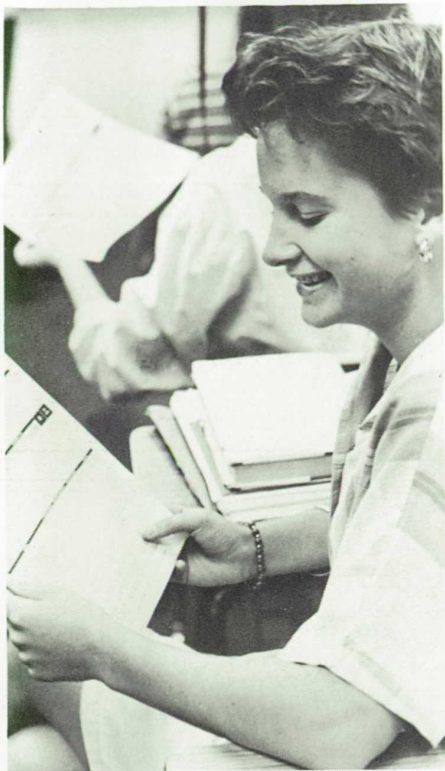

To accomplish all this we tapped that incredible intangible stimulant known as Eagle Pride. We accepted our defeats with dignity and our accomplishments with humility. And most importantly, we never lost our sense of humor, or our desire to have fun.

SHOUT IT OUT: Students show their school spirit for the Eagles win over Copperas Cove, October 2.

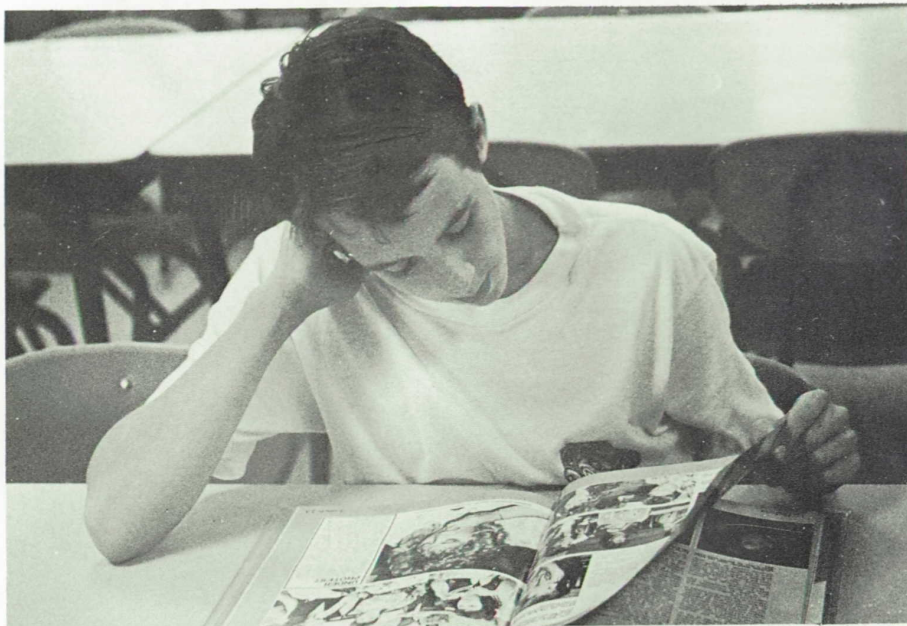

Dress up days highlighted the fall and the Powder Puff football game provided unforgettable good times. And as the year progressed and most students seriously pursued academic endeavors, there were times when we let ourselves turn loose and Let the Good Times Roll.

GOOD REPORT: Senior Anne Hebert looks over the results of her new report card. Report cards took on a new look, with a copy for the students and one for the district.

LOOK HERE: Sophomore Troy Corn looks through the 1987 Aerie for pictures of himself and his friends.

HIGH SPIRITS: Seniors Erica Garcia and Julie Lozano paint spirit signs for the game against Waco.

LET THE Good Times Roll

Years from now when the 1988 graduates show this yearbook to their children and grandchildren, the fact that we only won one football game or the fact that everyone wore acid washed jeans this year won't matter much.

What will you show them?

The picture of you and your high school sweetheart standing by THE WALL before school? Or how about the picture of you sleeping in math class? Or the club group picture where you were third from the left on the back row? How about the one at graduation when you and your classmates tossed mortar boards and dreams into the air?

Let us help you remember those times. The 1988 Aerie staff wants you to sit back, remember, and Let the Good Times Roll.

ALL SMILES: After the Copperas Cove football game, seniors Tommy Leonard and Koby Kielman join in singing the school song.

PEE WEE HERMAN: Coach Brian Huckabay climbs a ladder to raise spirit, then receives a pie in the face.

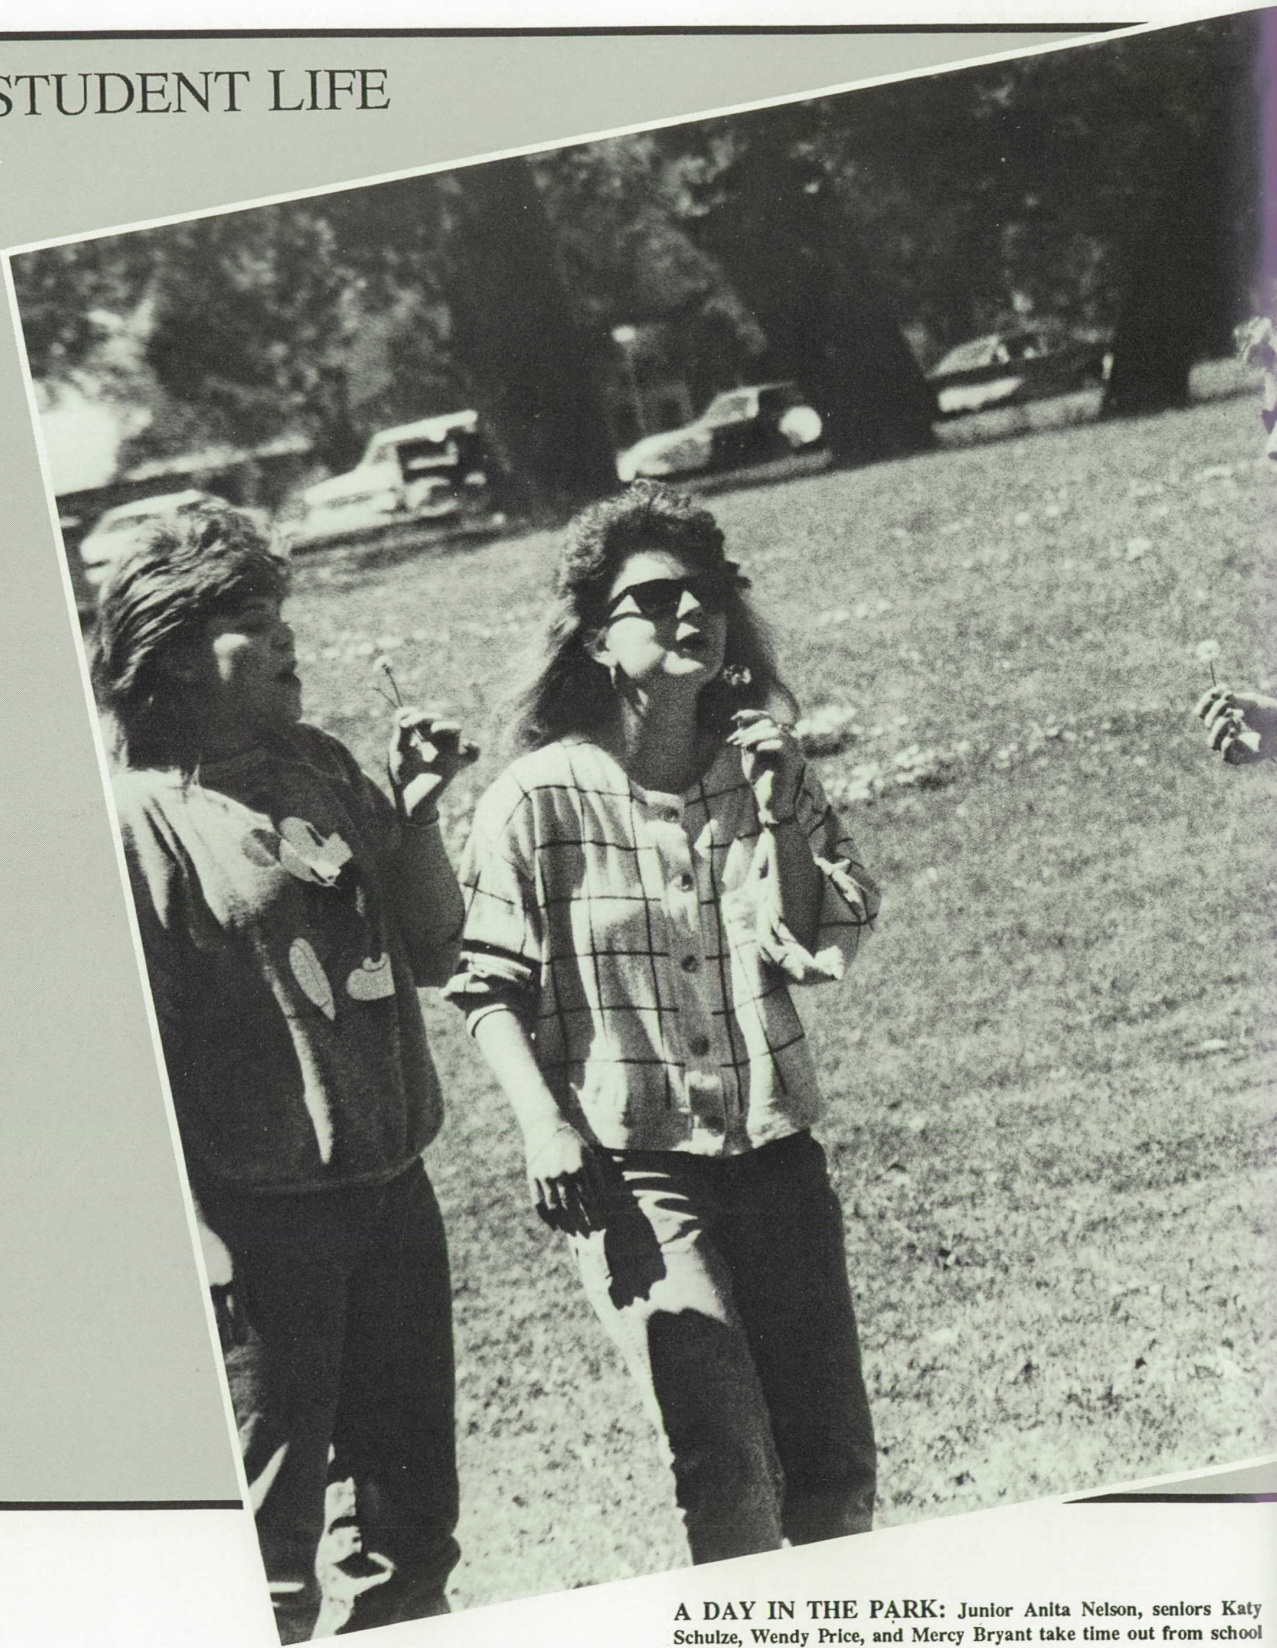

BABY FACE: Child Development students Steven Stanfield, Vanessa Daniels, and Hyla Hundley watch as Craig Williams holds a baby.

STUDENT LIFE

A DAY IN THE PARK: Junior Anita Nelson, seniors Katy Schulze, Wendy Price, and Mercy Bryant take time out from school to blow dandelions in the park.

Time Of Our Lives

Whoever said, "High school is the best time of your life," lied.

What about Homecoming when we lost, or the weekend you got in trouble and couldn't go out for the next two? No, not all time in high school is the best.

But we don't want to remember that, we want to remember the best times like when you got a spirit towel at a pep rally, when someone asked you to prom and when you and your friends went out on weekends.

"This year has been my best year of high school, because I can date and I have more friends," said junior Melinda Smith. "I turned sixteen and now I have my own car, I make my own money and I get to go out more."

Who is to say when the best time of our lives is?

"The best time is when you start kindergarten, because you have no responsibilities," said sophomore Amanda Braun. "You're too little to take out the trash, or wash the dishes."

"As of right now this is the best time of my life," said senior Hyla Hundley. "I've only lived for 18 years. Give me a break."

The First Day

TIME AGAIN

The first is supposed to be the best. Some students couldn't wait, while others faced the prospect with dread. It couldn't be put off. It was the first day of school.

"I was afraid," said freshman Wes Whiteaker. "I had heard how much harder high school was, and how it was so hard to get from one class to the other on time."

The first day presented parking problems, schedule conflicts and locker confusion, but many agreed that the most serious problem was not getting the right lunch period.

"Last year I had fifth lunch with my friends," said senior Jennifer Plentl. "When I got fourth lunch this year and my friends got fifth, I was upset. It turned out OK because I made other friends in fourth lunch."

Students were greeted with longer lunches and fewer classmates, but larger classes.

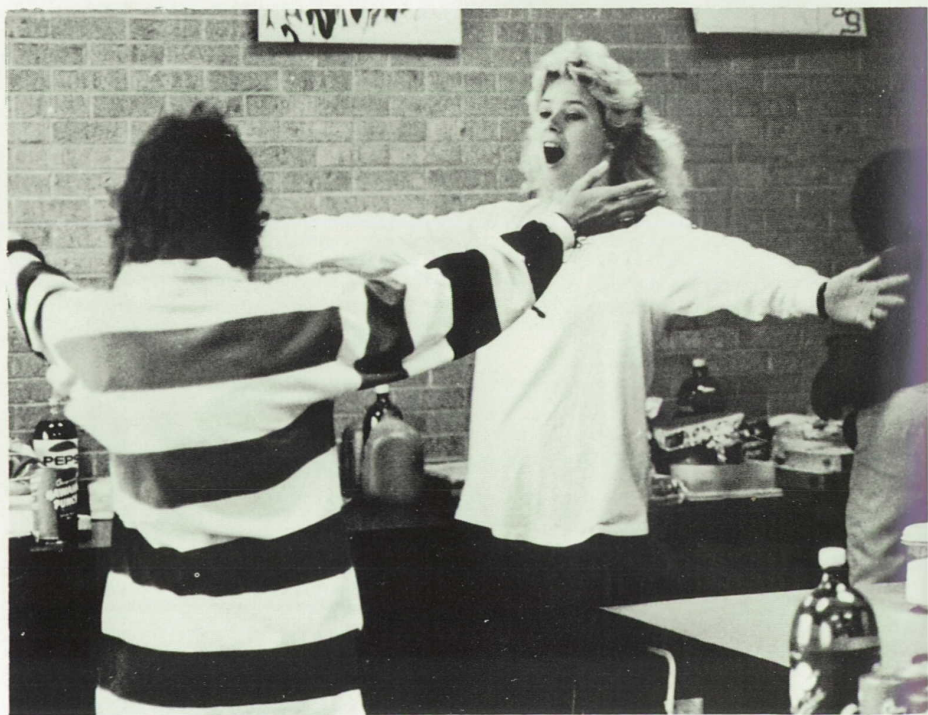

Even though confusing and frightening, the first day was a time to renew old friendships and make new ones.

"The first day of school was great because I got to see everybody," said senior Janet Bohanan.

EARLY START: Freshman Jennifer Stewart gets ready for her first day of high school.

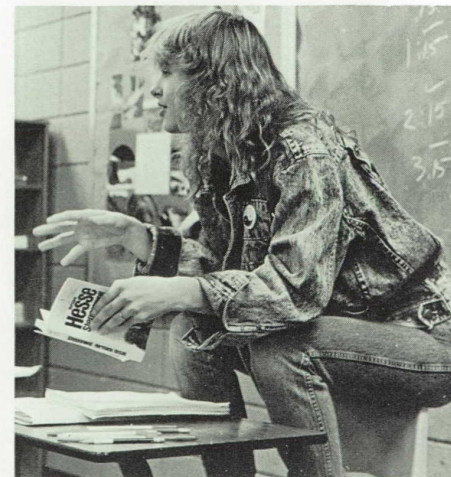

GLAD TO SEE YOU: Junior Thelayna Hardeman welcomes a friend back to school.

CATCHING UP: Sophomores Carol Navarrette and Sharon Yeary catch up on what they did over the summer.

COMING THROUGH: At the first pep rally of the year, senior Todd Keith enters the gym through the new vinyl spirit sign.

NOW LISTEN UP: Senior Stephanie Walker goes over the main points in a book she read for Humanities.

CHOW TIME: With a longer lunch, junior Krystal Klingemann can take the time to eat lunch in the park.

Pep rallies spark early morning spirit

A GOOD TIME WAS HAD BY ALL

Probably the only place most people expected to find pi was in the Geometry room, but this year pi (pie) became synonymous with pep rallies.

"When I saw Mrs. McAferty climbing up that ladder and everyone was screaming, I didn't know what to expect when she climbed back down," said senior Shonna Paggett. "It was really unexpected when she got slapped in the face with a pie."

In addition to flying pies, pep rally spectators were treated to twirlers, Georgettes, cheerleaders, band, and speakers.

The football, volleyball, and cross country, and basketball teams were all cheered on to victory.

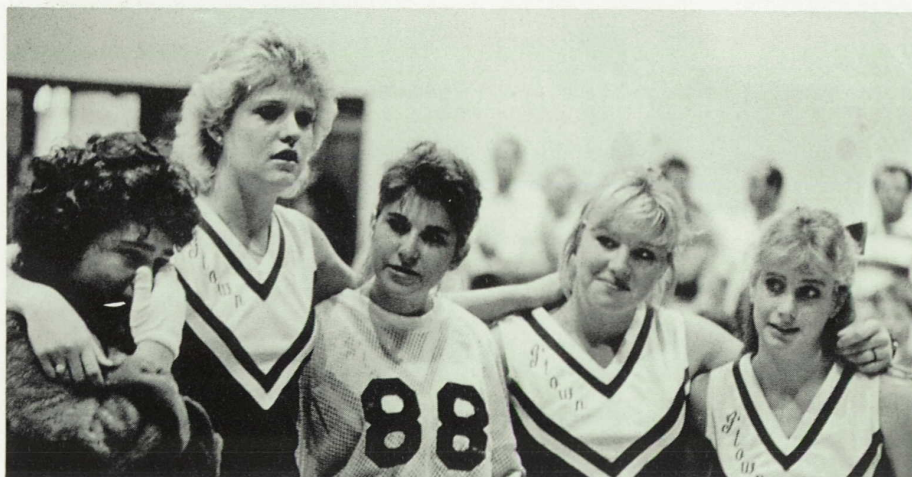

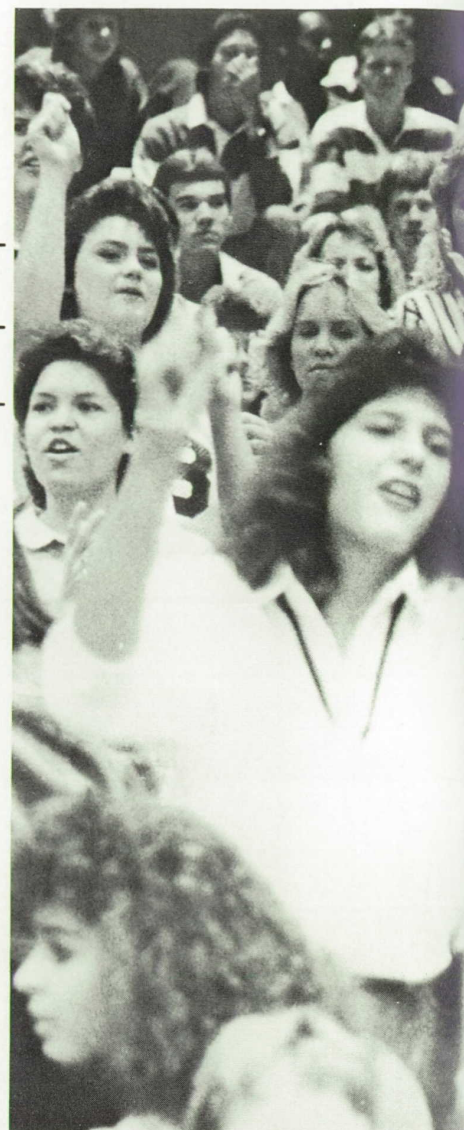

To break the monotony of the week, students dressed up on dress-up days.

"When students dressed up for pep rallies it added a lot of spirit, and it did not matter if they looked ridiculous because everyone thought it was very cool to have the guts to do it," said senior Amy Varnell.

For the first time pep rallies took place in the new gym. The students were able to spread out in the stands and the cheerleaders decorated the gym weekly with streamers, balloons, and signs, and on Homecoming a huge arch graced the floor providing a blue and white backdrop for the introduction of the nominees.

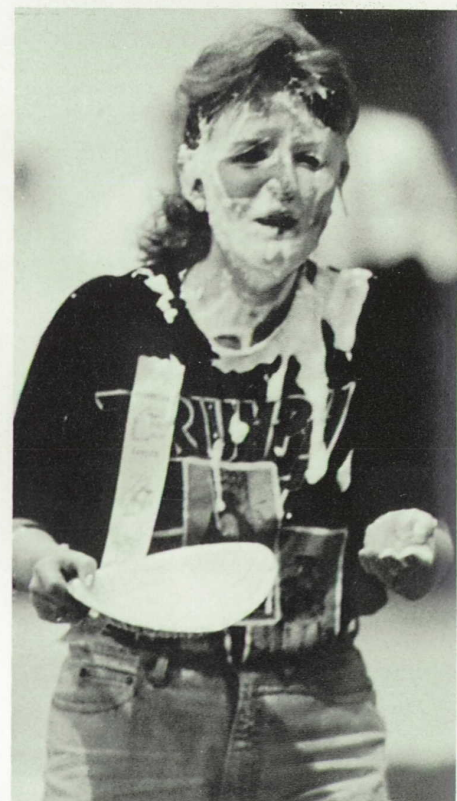

"The new gym with all the decorations created a spirited atmosphere that made pep rallies fun," said junior Cory Conner.

SHOUT IT OUT: Seniors spell VICTORY in unison as the battle cry is sounded during a Friday morning pep rally.

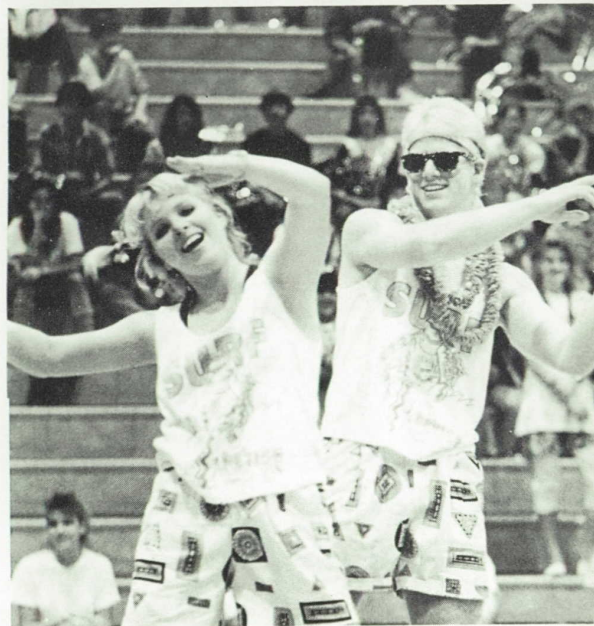

FRIENDS FOREVER: Seniors Jeannie Copeland, Krystal Hanson, Jennifer Zeplin, Lori White and Candace Thrash shed tears at the last pep rally Nov. 6 when juniors sang Friends are Friends Forever.

PIE IN THE FACE: Math teacher Mrs. Tally McAferty spurred students to rousing spirit when she offered to take a pie in the face if all pep rally spectators stood up and cheered at the Box the Bulldogs pep rally Oct. 2.

WIPEOUT: Superintendent Jack Frost raises spirit for the Beach Bum pep rally before the Westlake game Oct. 23.

SURFIN: Seniors Lori White and Victor Donahey dance to the beach music at the Beach Bum pep rally Oct. 23.

REVENGE OF THE NERDS: Juniors Nicole Porch, Denise Samford and senior Suzy Shelor show their enthusiasm at the Pee Wee Herman pep rally Oct. 9.

Young girls, bonfires, and dancing enliven Homecoming '87

TIME TO COME HOME

Young girls, bonfires, and dancing. It wasn't an ancient tribal ritual. It was Homecoming '87.

Thursday night before the annual celebration, dedicated members of each class spent their time on their hands and knees sloshing paint on paper, hanging signs, and collecting wood for the bonfire.

"We collected wood so the junior class could make money for the prom," said class officer Jarret Mallon. "We couldn't have done it without our sponsors and the volunteers from the junior class."

The juniors won the $50 prize for having the most wood for the bonfire.

Friday the pep rally honored the 30 court nominees and their escorts. The pep rally also featured the cheerleaders, band, and Georgette seniors and officers, who performed to "You Got the Look" by Prince.

During half time of the game, the 1986 Homecoming Queen, Amy Hodge, crowned Cindy Guajardo as the 1987 queen.

Cindy's court included Lynnae Goodley, Krystal Hanson, Melanie Rosenbaum and Jennifer Butcher.

"Being crowned Homecoming Queen was like a dream come true," said Cindy. "It felt great when it happened because I know it depended on how the school voted."

Although the Eagles lost to San Antonio Edison, other festivities flourished.

Friday night after the game, ICE, a mobile DJ, sponsored a dance at the Community Center for students and exes. Saturday night ICE provided music for the Student Council sponsored semi-formal dance for students only in the commons. A photographer was on hand to take group, couple, and individuals pictures of dancers.

"I really like the way Homecoming was made into a bigger deal this year," said senior Janet Heilman. "It was fun to dress up instead of wearing just the same old thing."

THE WINNER IS: After being crowned Homecoming Queen, Cindy Guajardo shares a smile with her escort, senior Victor Donahey before leaving the field by horse and buggy.

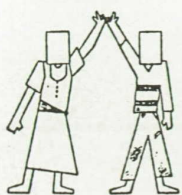

MUM'S THE WORD: What would Homecoming be without at least one mum? Here varsity cheerleader Hyla Hundley stands before her mum-decorated megaphone at the Friday morning pep rally.

CEDAR CHOPPERS: For the first time in two years, students celebrated Homecoming with a Thursday night bonfire. Juniors Becky Anderson, David Dittrich, and David Salyer collect wood for the junior class, who won the $50 prize for the class who collected the most wood.

Traditions keep the ball rolling

TIME AFTER TIME

What would the school year be like without a pep rally or Homecoming? What if we never had dress-up days or sang the school song with our pinkies linked?

We carried on many traditions. Some had been around for many years, like tardies, second period announcements, licks, mums at Homecoming, semester exams, and pep rallies on Fridays, and some were new this year like ID cards, student directories and a new form for report cards.

"Having announcements everyday helped students know when to listen for upcoming happenings and events," said junior Rhonda Doerfler.

As the year went on we made some traditions more obvious like touching the Eagle on game day for good luck, the bon fire, and hall decorating.

"Without the junior's wood for the bon fire, there wouldn't have been one near that size," said junior president Becky Anderson. "The bon fire is an important tradition to Homecoming."

Sports had traditions, too. Volleyball and football players and cross country runners sat on the gym floor during pep rallies. The football players went through the run-through sign made by the cheerleaders.

"It helps us feel like part of the pep rally, since football and volleyball seasons run together," said volleyball player Sophia Frost.

Georgettes had their own traditions. They chose Georgette Escorts and initiated new members.

"We say the Lord's Prayer before every Georgette performance for good luck," said corporal Katy Schulze.

Band members chose a beau and sweetheart and performed at pep rallies. One favorite band tradition was the playing of "Wonga Boom Chick" at pep rallies and in the stands during football games.

"Pep rallies wouldn't be as loud without the band. We help raise a lot of spirit," said senior Jim Collier.

HIT THE BEACH: Volleyball players (Front) Sophia Frost, Belinda Skaggs, Jauna Martinka, Tamara Marburger, Missy Rothell, and Nicole Porch (Back) Kami White, Amy Coufal, Kristin Carr, and Jennifer Durfee join in yelling at the Beach Bum pep rally.

BUMMED OUT: Mrs. Mary Alice Brinley and Mrs. Tally McAferty soak up some rays in the senior wing during passing periods on Beach Bum day.

ALL STACKED UP: Before the first bonfire in two years, junior J.T. Eli climbs on the stack of wood.

BUG OFF: Sophomore Joel Bohanan checks over his bug collection, required in biology classes, before he turns it in.

SWEETHEART: Principal Tom Foster crowned Senior Holly Grimes Football Sweetheart during halftime ceremonies Oct. 23. Holly was escorted by junior Corey Jackson.

Hard Work Pays Off

P RIME TIME

Months of hard work came down to this three-day event at the annual Williamson County Livestock Show December 3-5 at San Gabriel Park.

"Six months before the show, I ran, fed, and bathed my sheep," said senior Kim Slaughter.

The show involved judging the animals' appearance and the owners' handling of the animal.

"The person that judged the lambs seemed fair to me," said junior Tabitha Langford. "He seemed to like a more refined lamb with a real good tone."

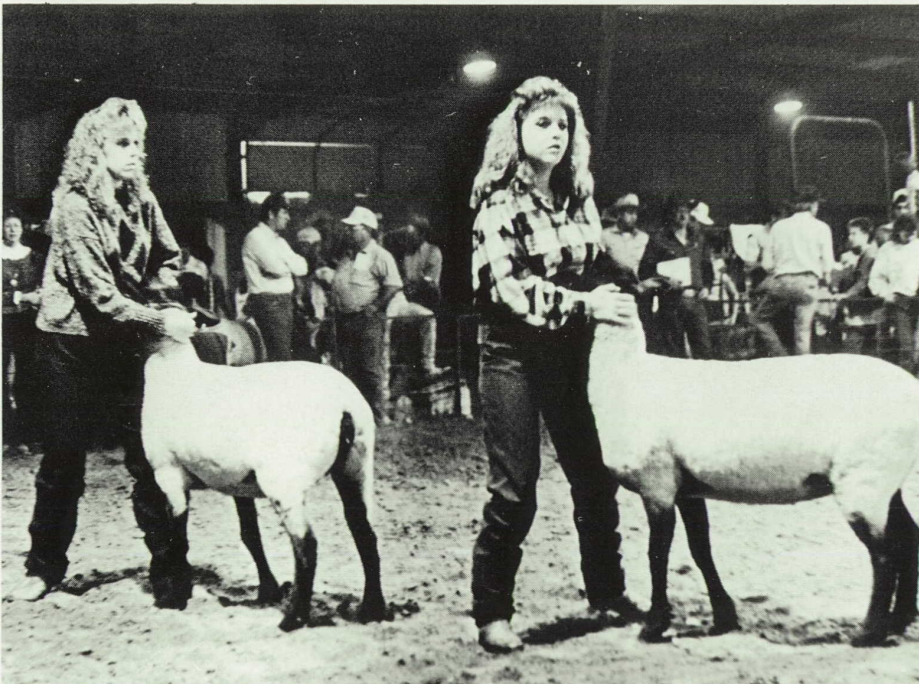

Ribbons were rewarded to those with the best animal in their class, and then two of these winners were chosen: Grand Champion and Reserve Grand Champion.

"My hog got first place," said junior Rissa Rodgers. "But selling them always makes me sad."

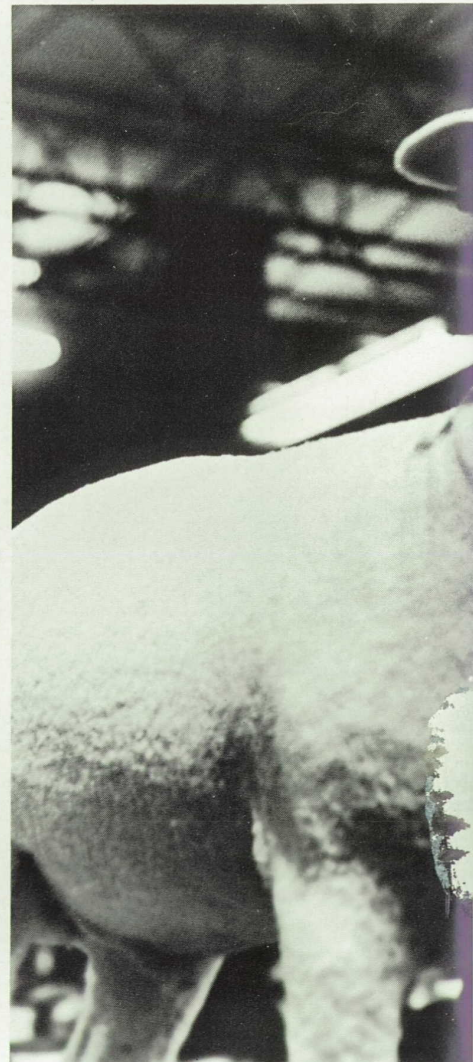

The top finishing animals are put up for sale after the show and can bring students substantial amounts of money.

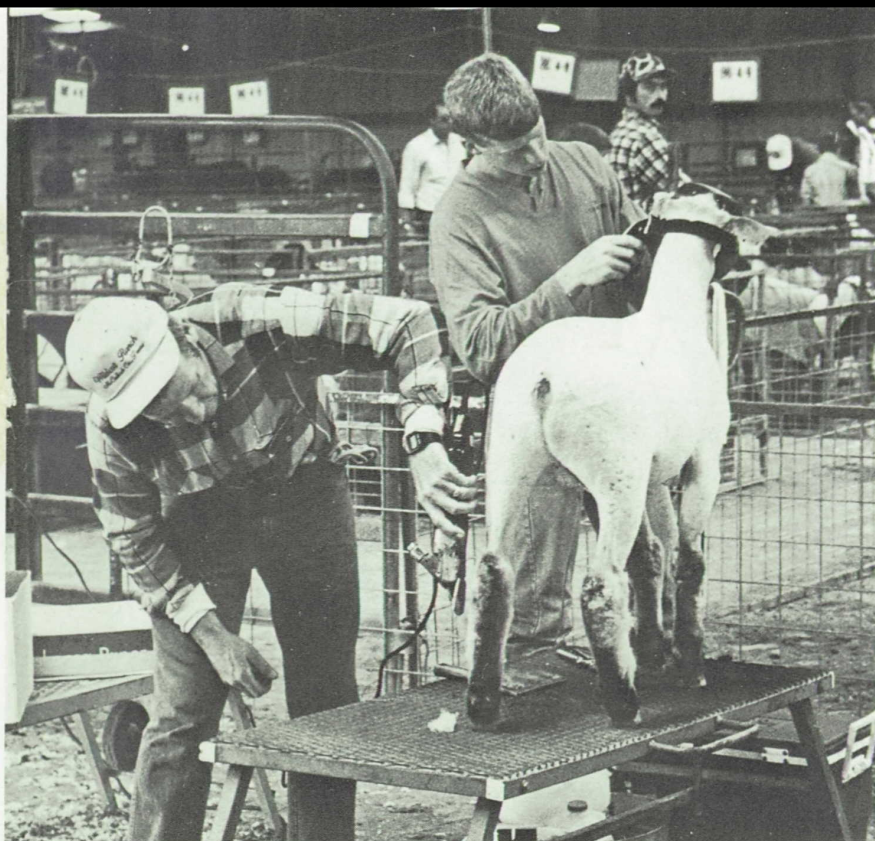

"I raised my lambs not just to get money," said junior Krista Klebold. "I enjoyed it."

Weekend Activities Vary

LIMITED TIME

So little time and so much to do. The year brought some changes to the weekend activities for students. New businesses such as Quazars and the Bowling Center provided entertainment.

Quazars opened in October and offered a movie rental area, a miniature golf course, a recording studio, and a video game area. The Bowling Center opened in the summer and students began going there instead of driving to Round Rock. Still many made the trek to the SPJST Hall and 6th Street.

On Friday afternoon the most frequently asked question was, "what are you doing this weekend?" Answers were as varied as students themselves.

"I go out with my friends on the basketball team or go out on a date with whoever my girl-friend is at the time," said senior Keith Shelly. "We go to the movies or to a car show to get out of Georgetown and to break the monotony of school."

"My friends and I ride around town and talk to friends or go to the SPJST Hall in Round Rock," said sophomore Sherry Muntner. "I go out to have fun and to see people I don't usually see everyday."

At the beginning of the year many students attended the dances after the football games sponsored by the Student Council.

"I loved the dances because they were a time to socialize with friends and have fun dancing," said senior Wendy Calta.

"They were great because

MOVIE MAGIC: Weekends provided a time for students to rent movies. Sophomore Amy Pressler picks out which movies she wants to take home.

we could go there and jam out," said senior Jennifer Zeplin.

After the football game dances ended, students had to find other ways to keep themselves entertained on the weekend.

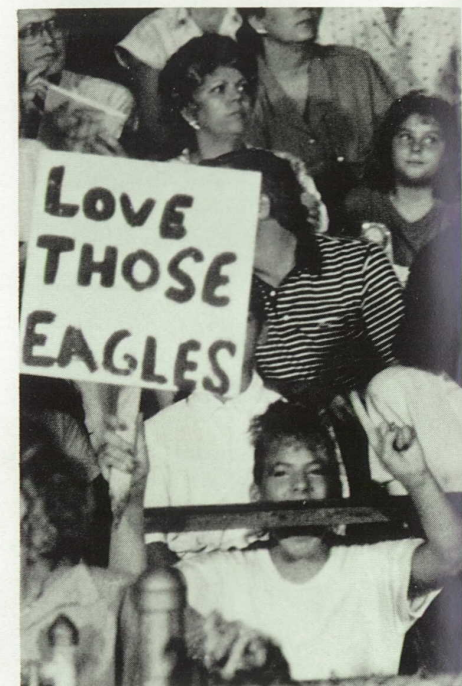

"We usually rode around town looking for a party or we headed to 6th Street in Austin!" said junior Karen Koch.

There were also students who used the weekend as a time for catching up on schoolwork.

"I used the weekends for doing my homework and bettering myself entirely," said senior Suzy Shelor.

"Sometimes I would have to stay home on the weekend to finish a project for school," said senior Katy Schulze. "I hated it because I would feel like I was missing out on all the fun."

The Game of Being Grounded

SERVING TIME

Go home. Go directly home. Do not go through 7-11. Do not collect your allowance. Do not watch TV or talk on the phone. Do not go out or use the car. What is this, a new form of Monopoly? No, this was the game of being grounded.

Many students learned to play the game well. Not only did students have to deal with punishment at home, but school, as well.

Homegroundings included things like no phone, no TV, no going out, and no friends coming over.

"My parents think I need a good education and it has to begin in high school," said junior Tabitha Langford. "So until my grades come up, I'm grounded for the next six weeks. I can't go anywhere, I can't use the phone, but people can still come over."

"Being grounded for six weeks is an incentive to get my grades up," said senior Amy Varnell. "Too many privileges are taken away from me."

Most students were grounded by their parents for failing a class or classes.

"I'm grounded from my girlfriend, a fate worse than death, because I failed Algebra I with a 62," said sophomore Scott Morris. "It really makes me want to raise my grades!"

Punishment was not only administered at home, but at school, also.

One of the punishments given at school was detention hall. This process included sitting in a classroom after school for thirty minutes with no talking.

"I got four days of detention hall for skipping class after lunch," said senior Krystal Hanson. "You can't laugh in there or smile or talk."

It's really strict."

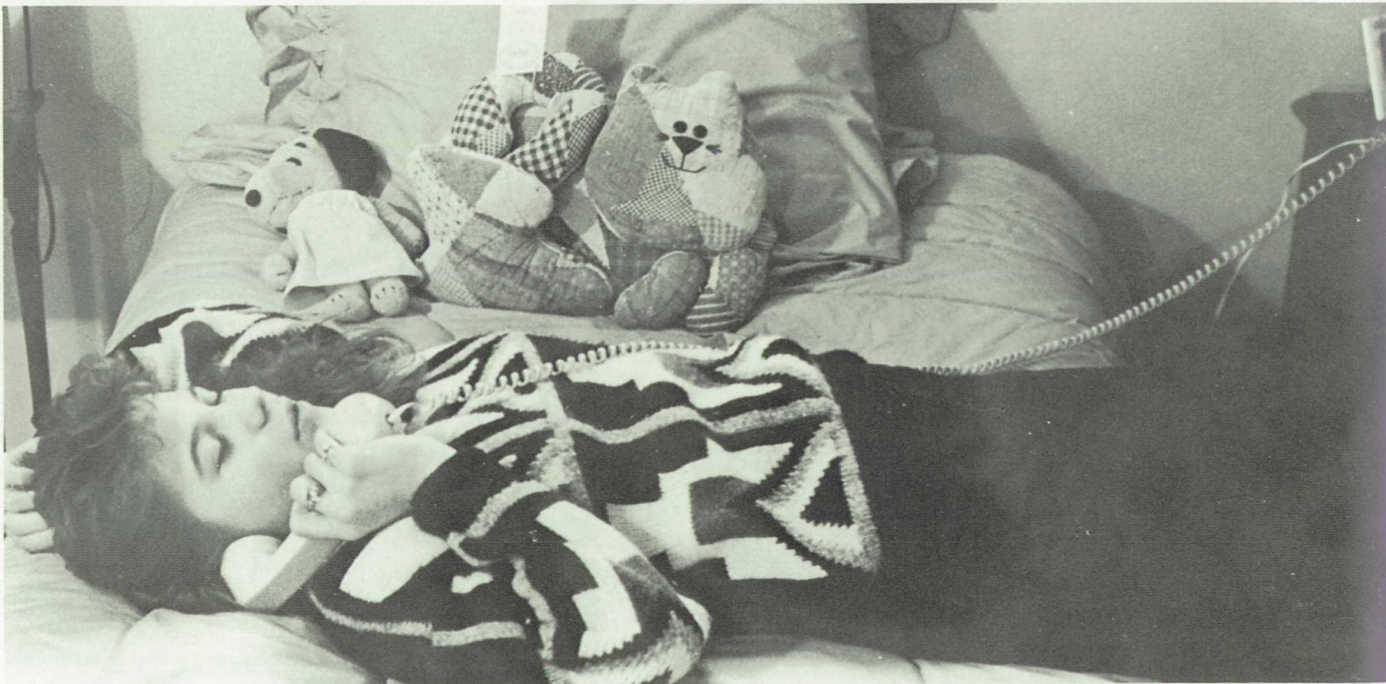

Another form of school punishment was corporal punishment. This was usually administered by the principal or vice-principals.

"I've been sent to the office for calling teachers names, being disruptive, instigating fights and for breaking a typewriter," said junior Chris Offield. "They've either given me licks or D-hall. It doesn't really bother me to get licks, unless they're from Mr. Hughes."

Some students have figured out how to get out of their punishment.

"My mother grounds me, but I usually get off the next day because I complain too much," said junior Kerrie Raum.

"I get out of being grounded by kissing up to my parents and helping around the house," said senior Katy Schulze. "It works everytime!"

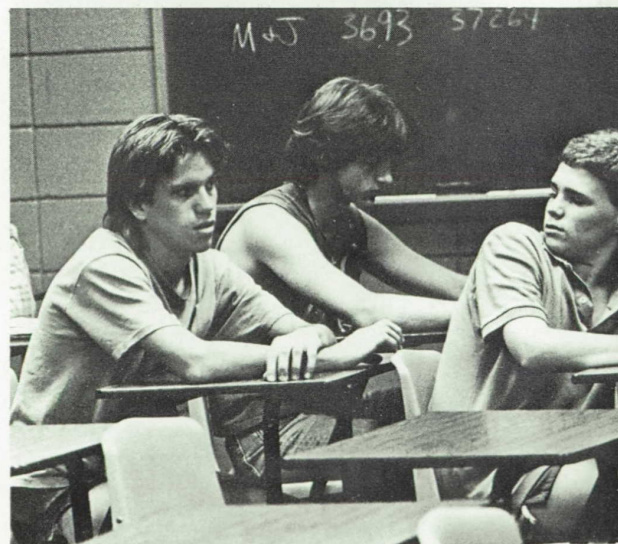

PHONE CHAT: Many students, who were grounded for some reason, used the phone for a connection to their friends and the outside world. Junior Tabitha Langford, who was grounded so she could spend more time studying to improve her grades, spends her time talking on the phone to one of her friends.

LATE AGAIN: Junior Dawn Parizek signs the tardy sheet, as Attendance Officer Mrs. Paula Brotzman fills out a tardy slip.

DOING TIME: Sophomores Chris Allesio and Ike Wilkerson wait for their thirty minute detention time to be over. Many students spent time after school in D-hall.

TOO MUCH TIME: Junior Alison Heath spends her evening in her room studying American History.

TIME IS MONEY

Hard economic times swept through Georgetown this year. Responsible for major losses in the school population, and faculty, and for program cut backs, the hard times forced some mom and dads to yell, "Get a job!"

"I need money! I love the non-working life, but I never had any spending money," said senior Angie Fite. "I always love the end of the week because it's payday." Angie worked for McCroy's as a clerk and cashier on Saturdays and after school.

Most students said that they worked either for spending money or they were saving up to buy a car.

Senior Shonna Padgett worked at Safeway during weekends and after school so she could save up enough money to get her own car.

"I hate not having my own car so I'm working at Safeway to earn money to get one," said Shonna.

Senior Paul Hardin worked at Fajita Junction where he served and made food. He started working in June when the store opened.

"I work so I can pay for my 280 ZX," Paul said. "I really don't like my job, but who does?"

Junior Tasha Fowler strayed from the norm about why she worked.

"I have to pay my mom back for my speeding ticket," she said. "It cost about $200. It's a blast working for my mom, so I don't mind giving up some of my free time." Tasha also worked for Fajita Junction where her mom was the manager.

Some students managed to open up their own businesses. Junior Joey Skero was one of those people.

"I have my own landscaping business with former student Quentin Riggins," said Joey. "It is a lot of fun, but it takes up the whole weekend."

There were some people who enjoyed their jobs.

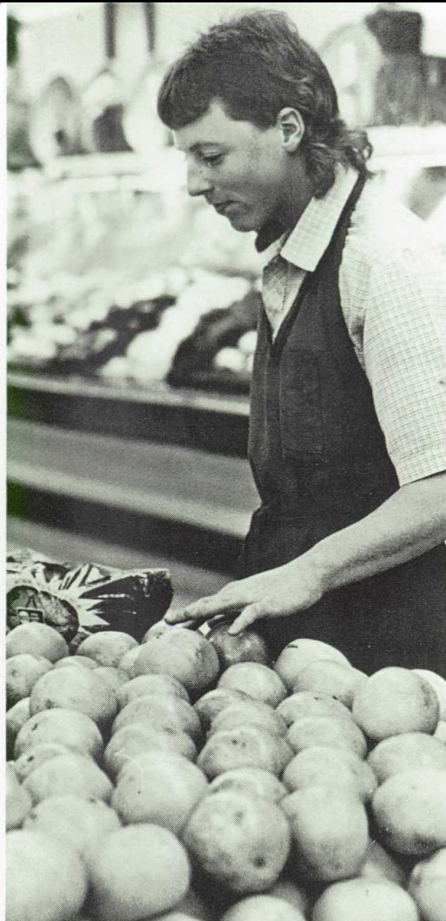

"I really enjoy my job at Gold's because I get to meet interesting people," said senior Wendy Price.

"I work hard at Hill Country Cleaners," said senior Janet Bohanan. "But I meet a lot of people so it can be fun!"

Most students agreed that having a job in high school was good experience.

"I may not like giving up my free time but I know later on I'll be glad that I've had work experience," said senior Katy Schulze.

PASS THE POTATOES PLEASE: Junior Kevin Mabry, who was in the work program, makes sure the potatoes are in place.

GOTTA WEAR SHADES: While working for at the Eye Center, senior Sundra Schaefer looks over the sunglasses.

ALL STACKED UP: Before the closing of McCroys, sophomore Kelli Sturm puts dolls on a display in preparing for a store-wide sale.

BAD TIMES

In the book, Alexander and the Terrible, Horrible, No Good, Very Bad Day, a little boy wakes up with gum in his hair, trips on a skateboard and drops his sweater in the sink while the water was running, all before breakfast.

He was having a bad day.

He wanted to move to Australia.

We have all experienced those feelings at one time or another, and on different levels.

Some people said they knew it was not their day if something awful happened, such as a wreck or other catastrophe.

"My boyfriend and I were in the parking lot when some girl hit my car," said senior Shelly Fedrickson. "We chased after her and got the license plate number. We have not seen her since."

Others said their bad days began with something less serious.

"I know it's a bad day when my hair won't stand up, or my contacts won't go in," said sophomore Carol Navarrette. "I always wear my hair sticking up and I can't see if my contacts aren't in."

For others a bad day started off bad and stayed that way all day long.

"It was my birthday," said junior Dawn Parizek. "It was also my first game to dance as a Georgette. We had to be at school at five p.m. Someone hit my car in the parking lot and I didn't leave school until 4:30. After we got to the game I twisted my ankle and didn't get to dance, then on the way home a contact fell out of my eye and I could barely see to drive. Then on top of everything I didn't even get a birthday present."

Senior Bianca Rodriguez had a similar experience.

"One night we lost a basketball game by about 30 points," she said. "Then when I got in my car I barely had any gas, and no money to buy any. I got stopped by the police for going so slow. I had no license, no insurance card, and a missing taillight. It was the worst day I ever had."

Some days we'd all like to move to Australia.

YOU KNOW IT'S A BAD DAY WHEN: Sometimes no matter how much one studied, the grade just didn't reflect it. Here a student mulls over his returned test. "I studied all night for Mrs. Cabrera's Spanish test, and still failed it," said junior David Gahagan.

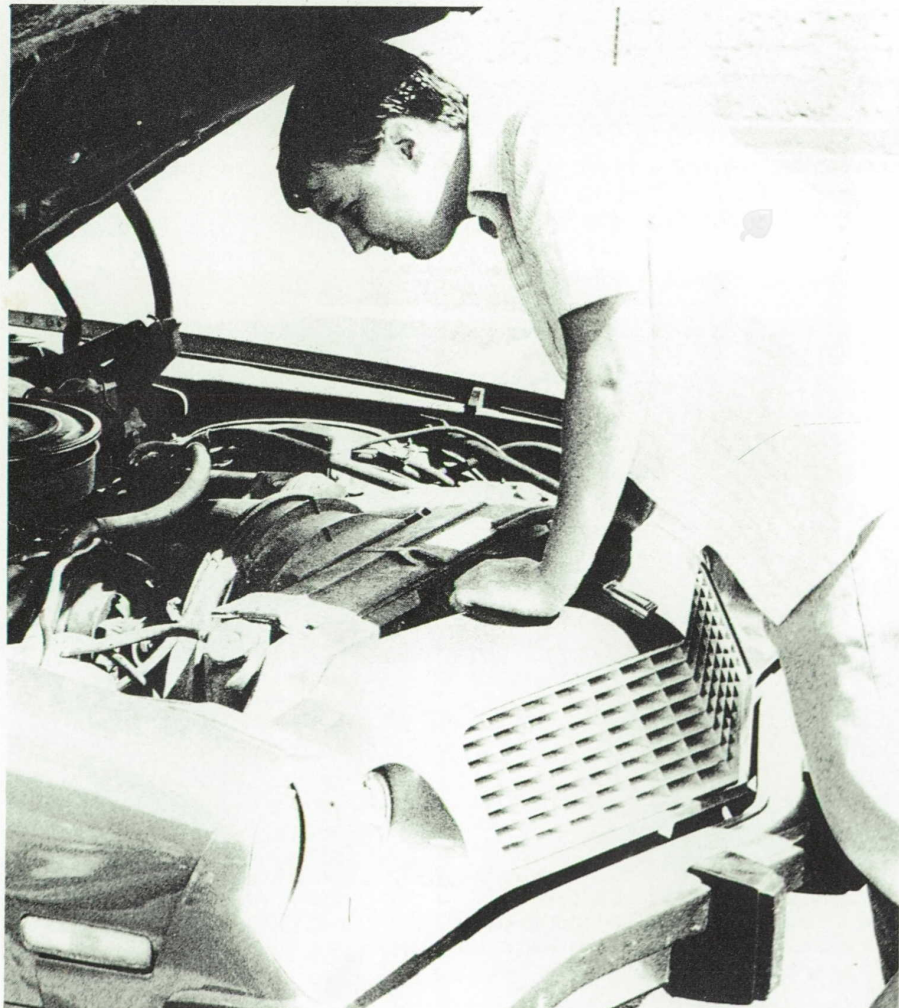

YOU KNOW IT'S A BAD DAY

WHEN: Many students nursed injuries sustained either on or off the playing fields. Junior Robert Rangel suffered an injury playing football and underwent surgery.

YOU KNOW IT'S A BAD DAY

WHEN: A dead engine could ruin the whole day. Sophomore Jason Hatfield looks under the hood to assess the damage.

Behind the scenes

ROUGH TIMES

Georgettes could not have won Sweepstakes without practice. Band could not have gone to contest without practice. Cheerleaders could not have cheered at games without practice. Athletes practiced before they took the field.

By choosing to participate in an extracurricular activity, students obligated themselves to extra hours to perfect their performances. These practices were held before or after school, and on weekends.

"For contest in drill team we have practice until 5:30 or 6:00 after school, and on Saturdays for at least three hours," said Lt. Dora Nemeth. "For the officers that just adds more time to practice."

Practices were not only limited to the school year. For activities like drill team, volleyball, cheerleading, cross-country, band, and football, the school year started in August or late July to be prepared for the school year.

"Two-a-days were very hard and strenuous, but they got us in shape for the difficult season ahead of us in football," said senior Victor Donahey.

The season's successes were not always reflected in the record book. The action brought excitement to the fans and gave the players the incentive to play well.

"Practice is nothing different than daily work done in classes, said Coach Larry Moorhead. "It leads up to the big test, just like playing in a game."

MARCH! Band members Kelly Maughan, Margaret Loescher, and Brent Saxon march with the band to prepare for contest.

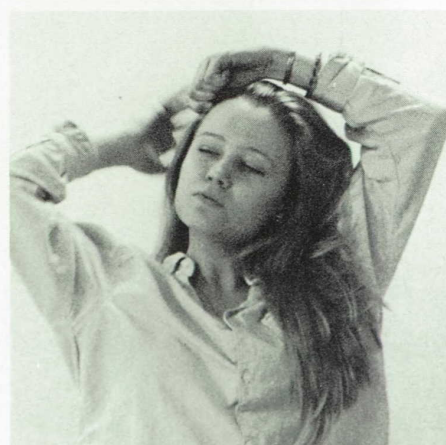

STAY ON YOUR TOES: Sophomore Cassandra Syler spends her time practicing Ballet techniques.

TRYOUT TRAUMA: Aspiring Georgettes strive to learn the routine for drill team tryouts. Future members learned one jazz and one military dance for the tryouts.

CRACK! Senior varsity soccer players Mike McMaster and Shane Stark drill on soccer techniques for upcoming games.

CLOWNING AROUND: Junior Angie Sprock prepares to show her solo routine for contest in Galveston in front of the team.

Seniors Declare Independence

BEST OF TIMES

When in the course of high school events it becomes necessary for the senior class to dissolve the educational bonds which have connected them with their school and to disregard the rules on attendance, a warm breeze and a beckoning beach requires that they should declare SENIOR SKIP DAY.

The fifth six weeks exam schedule called for exams on Wednesday and Thursday, and some students took advantage of April 15 for their annual exodus. Over two hundred students took advantage of this opportunity and spent the day as they chose. Many students headed to lakes and fun parks, while others slept in or went shopping, or took college days.

"I took a college day, so it was legal," senior Suzanne Hindelang said. "We stopped by the U.T. administration office on the way to Sea World in San Antonio for the grand opening. On the way back I stopped off at The Frank Erwin Center to see The Boss."

"I just went to my brother's house and laid out," said senior Shonna Padgett. "It was unexcused so I got five days D-Hall."

"We went skiing," senior Todd Leach said. "The water was 63 degrees, and we came out purple."

Since many teachers anticipated the skip day, some chose to give quizzes and tests. This stopped some seniors from skipping off. Class sizes were, still, drastically reduced that day. For the teachers and the remaining students, the day was different, to say the least.

"At least half my classes were missing," physics teacher Paul Hudspeth said. "I didn't count that lab for the hot dogs. In high school I think I skipped a day or so."

Julie Lozano and I came to school," said senior Erica Garcia.

"We had an accounting test and the make-up tests are always harder."

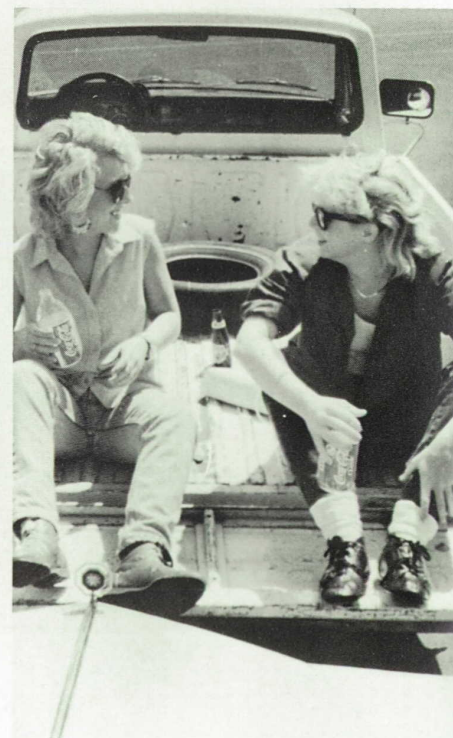

"I was here at school and Tom Leonard and I came out of Economics and went down the hall," senior Tom Moore said. "We were the only people at our lockers in the senior wing, so we left."

Although Senior Skip Day was frowned upon by the school and parents alike, students had fun while trying to have a good time and stay out of trouble.

"We passed my mom in Austin," senior Tanya Hall said. "I hit the floorboard."

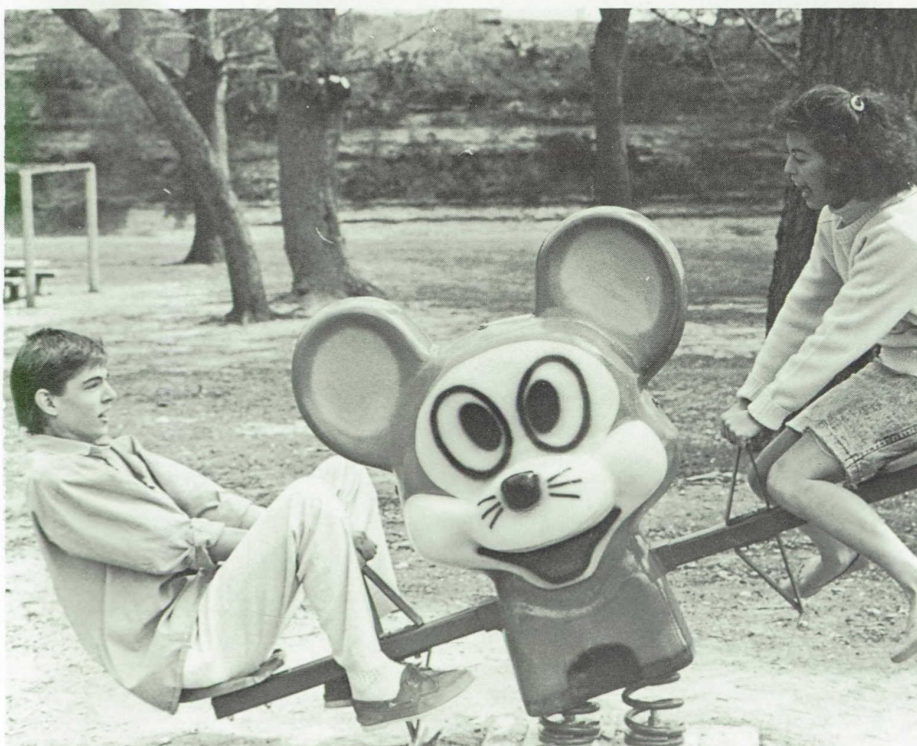

SONIC TRAVELERS: Seniors Wendy Price and Jim Collier stop for a quick bite before heading to the lake.

COKE AND A SMILE: Seniors Cathy Cosper and Melissa Rouse sit back and try to decide whether to go shopping or to the lake.

SOAKING: Senior Brant Woodson takes advantage of the beautiful day to enjoy pleasures of Lake Georgetown.

UP IN THE AIR: Some seniors went no further than San Gabriel Park to have fun. Matt Johnson and Kelly McInerney give the mouse a workout.

April Showers, Bring May Flowers

SPRING TIME

April, as the saying goes, brought showers, flowers, sunshine and fun, as well as the promise of summer.

"In the spring, we go water skiing and skeet shooting. We like guns. It's fun," said senior Steven Gray. "We shoot in my backyard."

Many activities kept students busy during the spring.

"I play softball to keep busy," sophomore Jennifer Stewart said. "I also go to the lake and lay on the rocks."

Many students started looking for their summer jobs in the spring.

"I got a job at the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department this summer," senior Tedd Muery said. "They give me 40 hours a week and good pay."

Not everyone was as lucky finding a job, though.

"It's difficult to find one because so many people are looking for them in Georgetown," junior Dean Bowers said. "You'd lose a lot of money on the gas you'd have to buy to commute back and forth from another town for a job."

Mayfair offered students a chance to participate and keep busy.

"I did the bike race. The chain fell off before I ever got out of the parking lot," senior Jim Collier said. "It was better than last year, there was a better turnout."

Some school-related clubs also participated in Mayfair.

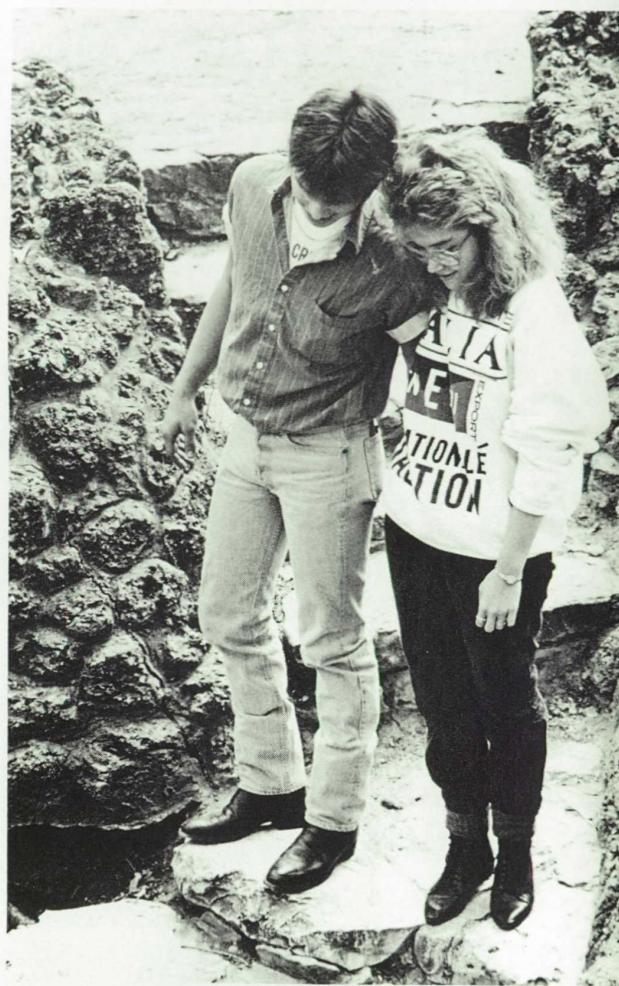

"Explorers sold lemonade. We made lot of money, sophomore Jeff Walters said. "I talked to a bunch of friends at the street dance. I didn't dance. I didn't realize Eddie Raven was that ugly."

UP, UP, AND AWAY: Many students performed on their skateboards during lunch and after school for their entertainment.

HEY, LOOK AT THAT: Many students went to the park during their lunch so they could be together.

CHANGING TIMES

"Want to go to a party?"
"Nah, I have to go home and throw rocks in my washing machine."

Sound crazy?

Not when the acid-stone washed jean craze spread among students.

An average pair of these "frosted" jeans ran $35, and some students resorted to throwing acid or rocks in the washer with their old jeans to give them the desired look.

"I wear acid washed jeans because they're extraordinarily cool," sophomore Michelle Crawford said.
"They're the most comfortable pair of jeans in my closet."

Many fads appeared.

"Colored Keds, stonewashed jeans, and jackets are my favorites," senior Hyla Hundley said.

Miniskirts never seemed to go out of fashion.

"I love the miniskirts because girls can wear them at any length, and no one cares," freshman Jennifer Sharpe said.

Units outfits continued to be popular with students.

"I like all the Units outfits because you can change them all
Surrency said.

Of course, there were always people who didn't want to wear what everyone else did.

"I like people who wear stuff that's not a fad," senior Tank Moore said.

CLASH ACT: Many students sported painted, concert, and Banana Republic shirts.
Senior Amy Varnell wears a hand-painted shirt as she discusses an assignment with concert-clad Charles Williams.

GROUP DISCUSSION: Mini skirts and Units provided a comfortable and up to date fashion statement for seniors Hyla
Hundley, Jennifer Zeplin, and Katy Schulze.

FROSTED: Junior Marcy Vogler wears her favorite acid washed jean jacket to class.
The acid washed look appeared on jeans, jackets, purses, and skirts.

JUST A T-SHIRT: There's nothing more comfortable than a T-shirt, but they could also make a statement. Senior Erica Garcia shows her message as she works on a project.

HOLE IN ONE: Torn jeans would not be found on Mr. Blackwell's list for the best dressed people, but they headed the fad scene, and could be found everywhere. Sophomore Bubba Lozano enjoys the comfort of air conditioned knees in his English class.

A BOW FOR ALL OCCASIONS: Senior Lori White holds her French braid in place with a bow. Bows were worn by many fashionable girls.

We could have danced all night

S HOW TIME

He's wearing a tux. She's wearing her prettiest evening gown. In true Cinderella style, the limosine awaits.

"I could only find one sock, so I was going to have to go with one black sock and one white one," junior Brett Sweet said. "My pants looked like knickers."

Many students found themselves in situations such as this as they prepared for prom. Juniors decorated from early Saturday morning until late in the afternoon, May 7.

"I had fun decorating. I stayed from eight in the morning until four," said junior Wendy Hicks.

"We basically got the food ready and put balloons in place."

Most people enjoyed their dinner before prom.

"We ate at the Magic Time Machine," said junior Dario Valdez. "It was awesome."

However, not everyone enjoyed paying the price for their dinner.

"Dinner was great, but we were robbed," senior Jim Collier said. "It was too expensive!"

Some students enjoyed everything about prom.

"I liked dinner the best. I liked the decorations. I liked it all," junior Brad Cockrell said.

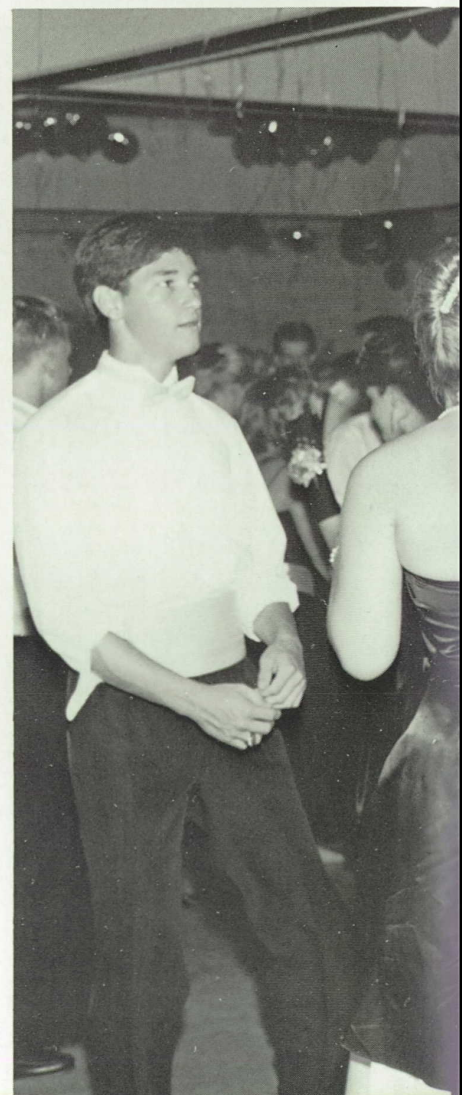

PROM ROYALTY: Prom King Mike McMaster and Queen Marcie Merritt smile as they receive their crowns. This was the first year those honors were given.

ALL ABOARD: Sea food and fajitas were served for prom goers on The Flag Ship Texas docked at Lake Travis. Mrs. Pat Thorton and Mrs. Debbie Segler greeted many prom goers on the ship.

PROM FAVORITES: (Front) Max Werkenthin, most-talented; Todd Keith, couple of the year; Keith Shelly, best dressed; Bianca Rodriguez, best all around; Laura Hayes, most talented (Middle) Matt Thomas, most likely to succeed; Mark Ramos, most athletic; Chris Johnson, most sprited; Paul Christie, duke; Mike McMaster, king; Alan Patterson, best friend;

Angie Kieschnick, couple of the year (top) Beth Christian, most likely to succeed; Kristen Curtis, most athletic; Jeannie Copeland, most sprited; Malissa Endsley, duchess; Hyla Hundley, duchess; Julie Lozano, best friend; Jennifer Butcher, best looking; Janet Heilman, best friend; Wendy Calta, best dressed.

HOORAY FOR HOLLYWOOD: Junior David Lester and senior Beth Christian stand under the awning that greeted prom goers upon arrival.

ONCE UPON A TIME

The world continued to turn as did its inhabitants. Events outside the high school experiences were numerous and varied.

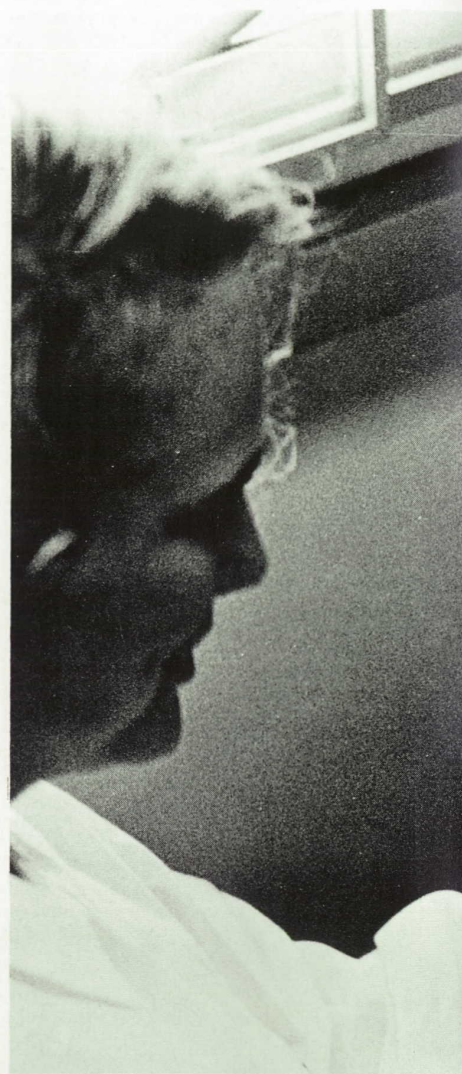

In international news, trouble in the Middle East escalated as U.S. and Iranian forces clashed in the Persian Gulf as problems continued in Israel and Lebanon. In Central America, political and economic crises took hold of Panama while Nicaragua and the Contra rebels worked toward peace after President Reagan's Contra aid was stopped. People of the world continued to be threatened by the AIDS epidemic. In more positive news, the U.S. and Soviet Union agreed on a missile reduction treaty; it was expected to be ratified by the Senate. Also, the 1988 Winter Olympics took place in Calgary, Alberta, Canada with the U.S. giving a less than satisfactory performance.

In the United States, the race for the presidency went into high gear. Governor of Massachusetts, Michael Dukakis and the Rev. Jesse Jackson struggled for the front-running position for the Democratic Party, and Vice President George Bush awaited his almost certain Republican nomination. Some of the issues the candidates addressed were those of the poor and homeless. And in unrelated national news, the most popular movies of the year were Three Men and a Baby and Fatal Attraction.

The Texas economy continued in a slump this year with signs of recovery finally appearing. The stock market dropped nearly 600 points on one day in October, and the effects could be felt throughout the country. And in a highly publicized state event, eighteen-month old Jessica McClure, was rescued from a water well in which she had fallen.

The local economy also suffered, with many businesses folding. This was a major issue in the races for city council and the mayoral position in Georgetown. Ercel Brashear and Doak Fling won positions on the city council, and Tim Kennedy took over as mayor. School board elections placed two new members to aid in the transition period when veteran Superintendent Jack Frost was replaced by Dr. Jim Gunn.

DECISIONS, DECISIONS: Junior Stephanie Thompson makes her selections in the class officer elections held at the beginning of the year.

A NOSE FOR NEWS: One ongoing story which claimed the headlines dealt with Panamanian strongman Noriega. Sophomore Amanda Braun reads about the latest attempt to ouster the general.

Goodbye, Mr. Frost

THANKS FOR THE GOOD TIMES

When there was a ditch full of muddy water separating a neighborhood from an elementary school, Superintendent Jack Frost built a bridge.

When a big puddle spanned the width of the front doors of a primary school, he picked up the little children and carried them across.

"We are here for the students, not for school superintendents," he said.

When Frost arrived in Georgetown in 1969, the first members of the class of 1988 were just being born. After 19 years, he graduated with them as he retired.

"I'll still support young people, but I'm going to miss it," Frost said.

Frost said that his association with the faculty and students during school activities was what he would miss most.

"Without a doubt, I will miss the board meetings the least because we met so regularly," he said.

Frost saw numerous changes while piloting Georgetown schools.

"The year I came we had fewer than 1600 students in the district and now we have about 4773," he said.

Since then the high school and junior high school campuses were constructed, and many new courses added to the curriculum.

"We've added French, Latin, German, journalism and vocational classes, girls' basketball, volleyball, tennis, track, cross country, and soccer in the past 19 years," he said.

Frost said his most memorable times centered around student achievement, since he had "always been one of those RAH-RAH guys."

"I'll surprise you, but winning 5A literary district sweepstakes brought a tear to my eye," he said. "The band, girls' basketball, and one-act play all winning state and the Southern Association rating us in the top 10 percent of the nation are also among my best memories."

Frost believed in solid support for all activities, without placing one over another.

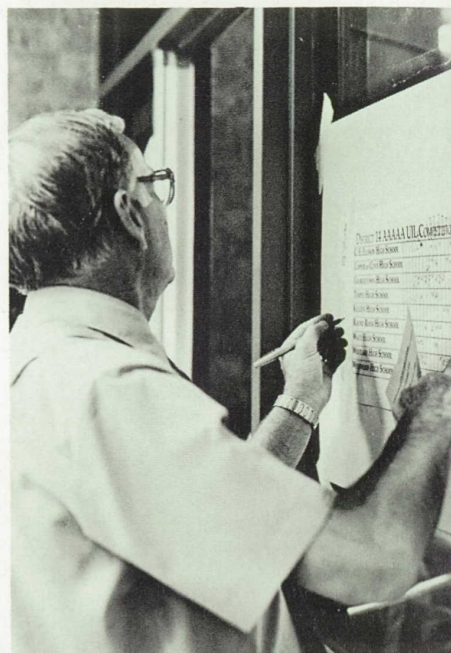

"Good schools are made by all the people," he said. "Having dedicated students and supportive parents is the only way to get anything done. There's nothing like cooperation."

Frost described his years in Georgetown as "outstanding."

"I have nothing but great thoughts for teachers, students, and citizens," he said. "The great things overcome the negative."

KING OF HEARTS: Superintendent Jack Frost offers senior Lori White strategic advice in a card game while passing time at the UIL regional literary meet in Mesquite.

AND THE WINNER IS: Superintendent Jack Frost tabulates results of the UIL district literary meet where Georgetown won the first place trophy. Frost later called that first victory in 5A his best memory as superintendent in Georgetown.

AH, SWEET VICTORY: Superintendent Jack Frost gives senior Malissa Endsley a congratulatory hug after she received one of her two first place medals at the UIL district literary meet.

Jack Frost Citizenship Award

A senior boy and girl who demonstrated Jack Frost's motto, "A positive attitude is the key to it all," were named Jack Frost Citizens of the Month.

One teacher, two senior boys, and two senior girls composed the selection committees, which each served for three months.

Those given the award had to (1) be a senior, (2) encourage other students, (3) respect teachers and peers, (4) make positive contributions to the school, (5) strive to reach their full potentials in all areas.

Winners were honored at luncheons and given $50 savings bonds.

No More Books, No More Teachers

LAST TIMES

May 27, 1988. The hill filled with yelling students. The goodbyes were said. Pictures were taken. It was the last day of school.

For many, the last day seemed anticlimatic. It came and went quickly.

"It doesn't seem like it's the last day," senior Jennifer Zeplin said. "I can't believe we're going to graduate in three days!"

Some people weren't very excited about the end of school because there were so many other things to do.

"I'm glad it's over," junior Carole Sexton said. "But I have to start summer school and correspondence courses soon."

Many had vacation plans awaiting them.

"I'm excited because I'm going to Alabama for two weeks as soon as school is out today," junior Anita Nelson said.

The last day of school had a special meaning for seniors.

"I'm very proud that it's over," senior Shannon Adams said. "I would not come back for all the money in the world."

For others, the last day came as a relief.

"I am so relieved that it's over," senior Stacy Tucker said. "I'm on my own now, so it might be a little scary."

Senior Hyla Hundley summed the day up for everyone.

"Thank God it's over," she said.

LATE AGAIN: Juniors Tabatha Langford and Wesley West and sophomore Josie Mikal wait in the office for their tardy slips.

It has been a pleasure getting to know you. I'm glad lab management has brought us together!

I hope we become better friends as the year goes on- LOVE U! Hillary SMILE PRETTY: Miss Georgetown Joell May and her court ride in the rodeo parade. Joell is flanked by Duchesses Christy Butler, Aimee Gore, and Christy Melton.

READY TO GRADUATE: Seniors let it be known they were ready to go by painting one of the billboards on IH35.

Last Days Full Of Activities

LAST TIMES

Cowboys, exams, dances, studying. What do all these have in common? The last days of school. In addition to school related activities, the Sheriffs Posse decided to move the rodeo from June to May giving many students an excuse to play hookey from studying.

"It was really hard to study when I knew everyone was at the rodeo," said senior Jennifer Plentl.

Many students didn't let exams keep them at home.

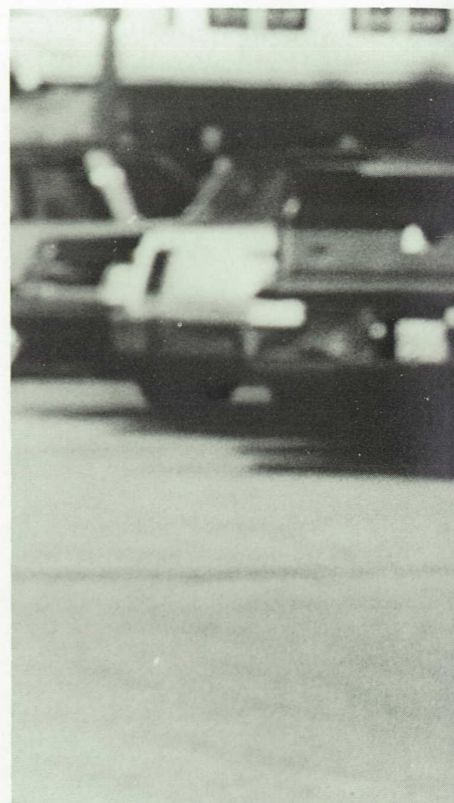

"The rodeo was really fun. I went even though I had exams, but I got up early and studied. I hope I did okay," said freshman Holly Dickerson.

Seniors had baccalaureate practice the last day of school.

"We had to practice walking in and they asked us not to do any pranks. The tension was great. You could tell we were all ready to get out," said senior Tim Mikulencak.

Underclassmen knew this was really not the last day, but just a break for awhile and then it would start over again. But seniors knew it was the end and time to let the Good Times Roll.

ALL CLEAR: A south wing hallway stands empty after the last student left May 27.

RIDING IN STYLE: ABWA scholarship winner Elizabeth Patterson rides in the rodeo parade May 26.

THE FINAL FINAL: Senior Brian Scheler puts the finishing touches on his final exam in drafting class.

LAST TIMES

It was a warm summer day. The perfect time for a quiet little picnic in the park. But this one wasn't so quiet.

Over one hundred seniors participated in the senior picnic. A free barbecue lunch and a chance to get Mr. Garrett all were provided, but the big fun came with pushing people into the river.

"I got thrown in, not pushed in," Wendy Price said. "They picked me up and threw me in."

Once they had gotten all wet, many went back into the river by way of a rope tied in a tree.

"I was scared to go off the rope but they made me," Cindy Guajardo said. "I did it once, only once."

The student council set up a dunking booth to make money for the Parents for Pride graduation party. Vice Principal Don Garrett and government teacher Stephen Eargle were the targets.

"It was great to see Mr. Garrett squirming for a change," Brian Kircher said.

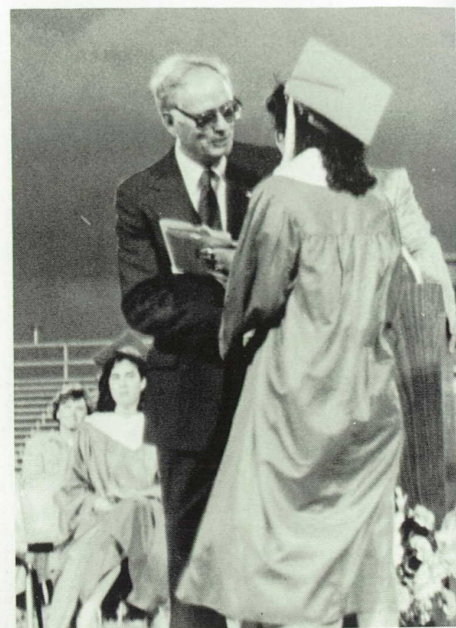

"I paid to get Mr. Eargle in the booth," Doug McLean said. "He went down hard."

But to many, the main attraction of the event was free food.

"I went for the free eats," Mike Penniman said. "It was pretty good too."

LOOK MOM: Russell Travis looks for his parents after picking up his diploma.

FROSTY SENDOFF: Superintendent Jack Frost presents diplomas to graduates.

FRIENDS ARE FRIENDS FOREVER: Senior choir members sing and sign the class song to the graduates.

TEARFUL GOODBYE: Jeannie Copeland shows emotion before she receives her diploma.

LAST TIMES

It was like a child waiting for Christmas. He knew that this year he would get the toy he had always wanted but he had to wait.

The day finally came. Just as the child got his toy at Christmas, the graduates got their diplomas.

Twelve long years in school finally ended May 30, for the graduates. Not only was this their year to leave, but it was also the last for Mr. Jack Frost, the superintendent of Georgetown schools for 19 years. Mr. Jim Shillingburg, president of the school board, gave Jack Frost the honor of handing out the diplomas.

"I'm so glad we finally graduated," Jennifer Plentl said. "I thought it was kind of neat that Mr. Frost gave out the diplomas for our class."

President of the senior class, Clint O'Rear, said in his speech that in a way, Mr. Frost was graduating with them. Many students felt this way as they hugged Mr. Frost after receiving their diplomas.

"I gave Mr. Frost a hug because I thought he might want to know that in his 19 years as superintendent, someone cared about him," Betsy Stewart said.

Valedictorian of the graduating class was Laura Kleen. Salutatorian was Malissa Endsley. Both gave speeches that encouraged graduates to be the best they could be.

Even though it rained intermittently during the day, the clouds cleared before the ceremony. Graduates seemed more concerned about their hats blowing off because of high winds rather than the sprinkling rain.

"I'm glad it stopped raining. I would have rather had graduation on the field in the rain instead of the gym anyway," Candace Thrash said. "I was worried that my hat would blow away."

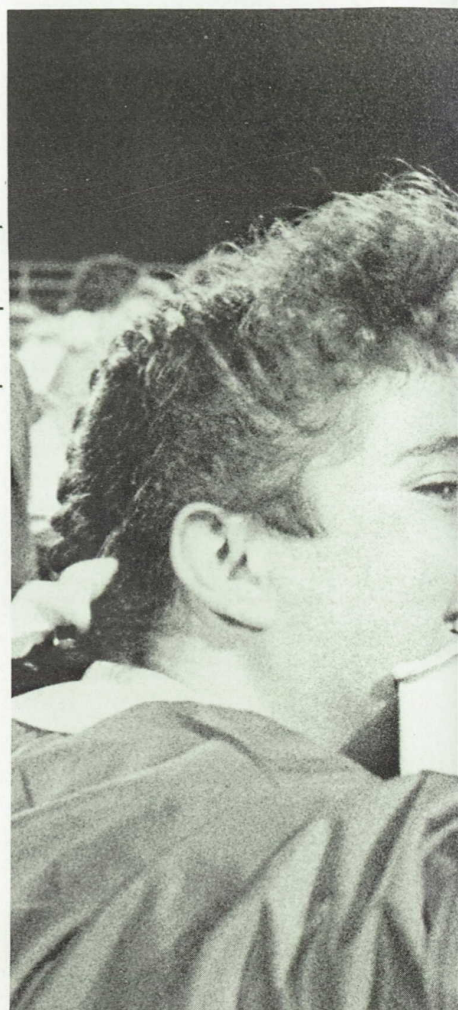

Some students couldn't make it through graduation without doing something unusual.

"I thought blowing bubbles during graduation was a good way to have fun and lighten things up,"

Cindy Guajardo said.

WE DID IT: Seniors congratulate each other after graduation.

SALUTORY ADDRESS: Malissa Endsley encourages graduates to be the best they can be.

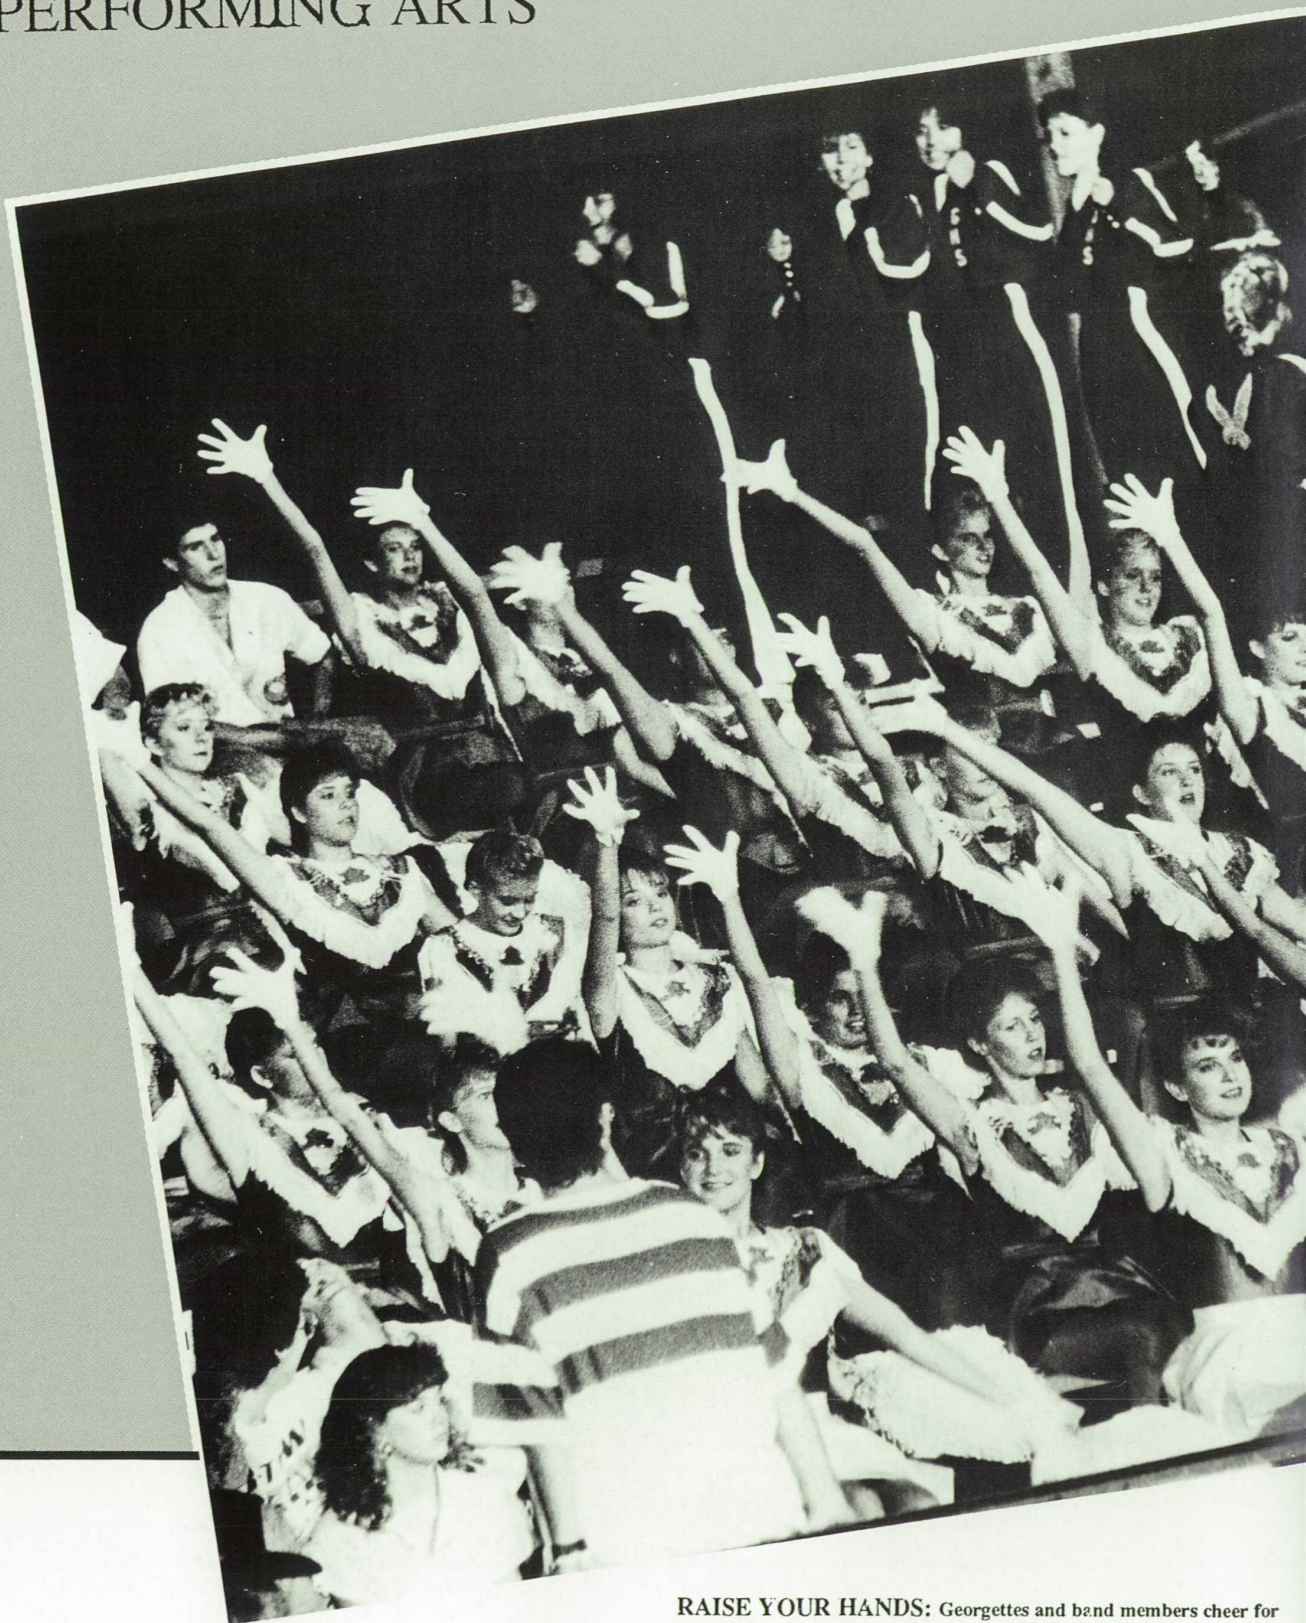

HATS OFF: Windy conditions played havoc with Suzy Shelor's mortar board.

LAST HURRAH: Graduates sing the school song at the completion of the ceremonies.

PERFORMING ARTS

RAISE YOUR HANDS: Georgettes and band members cheer for the Eagles at the Waco game at Lion Field. Even though the Lions defeated the Eagles, the game was forfeited because Waco had an ineligible player, and gave us our second season win.

Let's Get The Show On The Road

Behind the scenes they practice, rehearse, and perfect. On the scene, they act, cheer, dance, sing, and play.

All performing groups spend hours working before, during, and after school. They even begin in the summer to start getting ready for a busy year.

"We worked six hours a day for two weeks straight, to prepare for our camp evaluations," said senior varsity cheerleader Lori White.

They get ready for football games, concerts, pep rallies, plays, and contests.

"For performances, we usually rehearse after school from four till six, sometimes they run over. Once last year we rehearsed until 10:30, for the performance of The Christmas Carol," said drama club vice-president Cassandra Syler.

Throughout the year they perform for us. Let's see what they've got. Let's get the show on the road.

DANCE TO THE MUSIC: Varsity cheerleader Jennifer Zeplin dances to the fight song at the Homecoming bon fire at Eagle Field.

TO THE TOP: At the varsity football games spirit was a must. Seniors Holly Grimes and Lori White lead a chant to boost Eagle spirit.

EVERYONE YELL: Senior Candace Thrash ends her cheer with precision during a varsity basketball game half time.

Let's hear it

Anyone who thought cheerleading was an easy job, should have been with the three cheering squads as they practiced four hours a day in the hot July sun in preparation for summer camp. Anyone who thought cheerleaders always looked their best, should have been with the squads as they met early each morning in August to paint spirit, yard, and run-through signs. And anyone who thought the gym turned up miraculously decorated every Friday morning should have been with the cheerleaders on Thursday nights, because that was when the miracles happened.

All three squads attended summer camp in San Antonio in July. Out of the over 200 squads in attendance, eight were selected for the finals. Two of those eight were from GHS. The varsity and JV had accumulated enough points during the week to be selected for final competition, and all three squads brought home the coveted Spirit Stick, indicating the most spirited squads at the camp.

Fall brought football and volleyball pep rallies, and for the first time, the new gym was used.

"The pep rallies were much more spirited and we were able to do a lot more in the new gym," said head cheerleader Holly Grimes.

Traditional pep rallies like the Beach Bum and KamiKazi continued to please crowds, and new themes such as "Rappin" proved popular.

"I liked the Beach Bum pep rally because we had all of the guys with us," said junior Dena Stephenson. "It was kind of scary doing the stunts with the guys, but it was lots of fun teaching and watching the football players try to be cheerleaders."

In addition to football and volleyball, the squads cheered at basketball games, and performed at a basketball pep rally at the beginning of the season.

"I had some of the greatest experiences of my life as a first year cheerleader," said senior Candace Thrash. "Even after all of the hardships, I'd do it all over again in a minute."

The girls were invited to radio station B-93 to do a cheer to promote the Easter Seals Telethon in the spring.

"I thought cheering on the air was one of the neatest things we had done all year," said senior Krystal Hanson.

SHE'S GOT THE LOOK: Senior Katy Schulze dances with other seniors and officers at the Homecoming pep rally Sept. 25.

Let's dance

Five, six, seven, eight get in place! The sound of counts and encouragements of perfection rang through the activity building during 7th period and after school as the Georgette drill team worked on routines.

"It's really hard work and you get frustrated when you can't get the moves," said sophomore Sherry Machalek. "I've learned that if you try real hard you can accomplish anything."

Preparation for halftime at football games took many tedious hours of practice for the team. "We have at least a good three hour practice a day, and sometimes a couple hours on Saturdays but the pay-off is worth it," said 1st Lieutenant Janet Heilman.

Georgettes were escorted by seniors Matt Thomas and Mark Cumberland, juniors Bill Clark, Nick Smith, Kevin Stabeno, Cory Warmink, Brett Sweet, and Jarret Mallon. "I had a great time being a Georgette escort," said senior Matt Thomas.

"The bus trips and Schlitterbahn were the most fun."

This was the first year freshmen were allowed on the team.

"It's neat because I got to meet a lot of older people, but sometimes I felt left out on things," said freshman Buffy Allen.

Georgettes went to Galveston to compete with three dances, and received a sweepstakes award. They took a novelty routine, "Surfin USA;" a prop routine using tamborines to "Holy Rollin", and a pom-pom routine to "Shakin".

"It was really exciting to receive a sweepstakes award for the second year in a row," said senior Jennifer Butcher.

Soloists receiving superior 1 ratings were seniors Katy Schulze and Jennifer Butcher, and junior Dora Nemeth.

"It was the first year for me to take a solo to contest," said Katy. "I was really surprised and happy that I got a chance to be rewarded for my individual performance."

MAID TO ORDER: One of the most popular routines performed by Georgettes was American in Paris, featuring the girls in French maid costumes. Lisa Stinnett lines up during halftime at Homecoming.

Let's pretend

When the acting bug bites, he bites hard.

Drama classes were popular elective courses. The classes were full and more people wanted in.

"The drama classes are quite full at this time," said drama teacher Helen Smith, "I hope that they continue to grow."

Reasons for taking this course were varied. Some students wanted to overcome shyness.

"I like drama because I'm trying to get used to doing things in front of people," junior Ken Kaspersen said.

Other students enjoyed acting and the prospect of becoming different people.

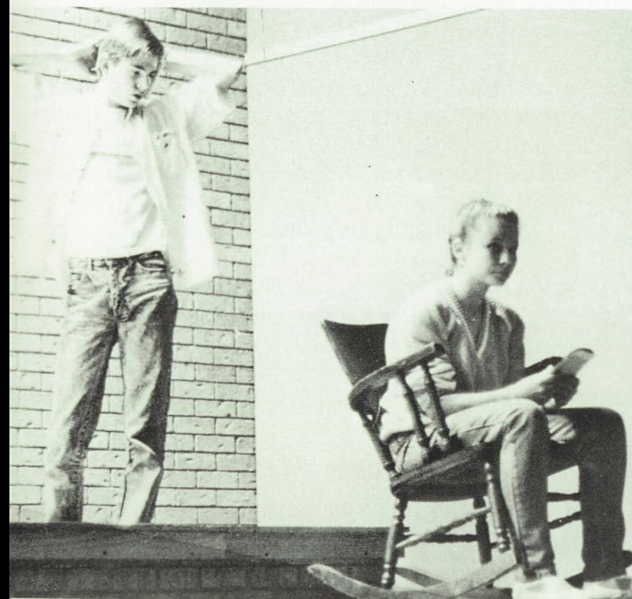

"I like to act because I have a large imagination," said sophomore Neil Vaughn. "And I can become anyone I want to be."

For the students who weren't going into acting as a career, drama taught skills that could be used in the students' personal lives.

"I enjoy being around people," junior Sheri Franklin said. "The way the class works, you have a lot of opportunity to just talk to people and have fun while you work."

Some students took acting more seriously and considered it a career.

"If you act, you need to be able to understand your character," junior Stephanie Thompson said. "If you wait on tables to make money, think of it as research. If you have the drive you've won half the battle."

LET'S WORK MIRACLES: Senior Matt Johnson and junior Claire Russell rehearse their lines for The Miracle Worker in drama class.

MAY I HELP YOU: Drama students Bobby Thornton and Sheri Franklin perform their roles in Bus Stop.

Waiting at the Bus Stop

There are three tables carefully covered with checkered tablecloths. To one side is a counter with several stools and a covered plate of donuts. A jukebox is lit up, waiting for someone to drop his dime in and pick his selection.

It is a March night in the mid 50's. The setting is a diner in Kansas City.

*If this scene sounds familiar, it might be because you saw the Off-broadway Players' production of Bus Stop.*

"I really didn't expect the set to be so elaborate," said senior Amy Remmert.

The play was directed by Mrs. Helen Smith. Laura Hayes was named to the All-star Cast at zone in her role as Cherie. Amy Johnson as Grace Hoyland, Chuck Williamson as Bo Decker, and Bobby Thornton as Dr. Lyman won honorable mentions at zone. Other players included Sheri Franklin, Chris Chapman, Wes Whiteaker, and Trey Wood.

"It could easily have taken place in Georgetown. All small towns are the same," said sophomore Debbi Bloom.

WHO ME: Senior Laura Hayes recreates the Marilyn Monroe role of Cherie in Bus Stop for the UIL One Act Play in March.

SCRUB, SCRUB: Senior Allyson Hammar, Junior Miranda Cisneros, and Mr. Bruce Johnson wash cars at a Choir car wash. This was one of the many fund raisers held this year.

FOND FAREWELL: Mr. Neal Campbell holds up a silver platter he received at a faculty meeting in appreciation of his seven years of hard work at G.H.S.

WISE GUYS: Junior Michael Allen and Mr. Bruce Johnson promote sales of the "Weyes Geyes" shirts at May Fair on the Square.

Let's sing a song

What did being in choir have to do with a No. 2 pencil? If you were a member of the choir, you sold them in the school store.

The school store was not the only money maker for the choir. The talent show and the Italian dinner in March, car washes, and paper drives helped to provide the $8,000 needed to send the choir to the Six Flags Over Mid-America Choral Festival in St. Louis, Missouri.

In addition to making money for the trip, choir members performed in the UIL Solo and Ensemble competition and at the spring concert in May.

At UIL competition, nine choir members won first divisions in solos. The winners were: Beth Napier, Jane Kuehne, Kathy Mason, Christie Butler, Brett Sweet, Becky Russell, Shelly Raschke, Kris Sanner, and Dawn Mickan.

The show choir's performance of "Jazz and Pizzazz" won a first division for their ensemble performance while two sextets also took a first division at UIL Solo and Ensemble. The sextets consisted of Beth Napier, Becky Frazier, Brenda Breitschopf, Kris Sanner, Allyson Hammar, Shelly Raschke, Donica Davis, Dawn Mickan, Tina Selle, Kammie Rodriguez, Miranda Cisneros, and Gena Allen.

At the end of the year, choir members bid farewell to choir director Neal Campbell, who retired after 36 years of teaching.

OPEN WIDE: Juniors Kristi Melton and Brett Sweet sing full of emotion in a show choir performance.

DRUM MAJORS: Patricia Reynosa and Tami Duke.

PRECISION MARCH: Band members Matt Gray, Melissa Martin, Tim Gahagan, and Mary

McEachron practice a difficult routine behind the school before district.

TOOT YOUR OWN HORN: Band members Tami Duke, Lauren Goodley, Michelle Hay, and Amy Williams play Christmas music at the Christmas Stroll in December on the Square.

Let the music play

Bowing to larger bands and stiffer competition, the band failed to qualify for the regional contest, placing fifth in district in October.

Bands from Round Rock and Crockett advanced out of the UIL District 18 marching contest leaving the Eagle band in shock after competing in the state contest for seven years.

"I couldn't believe it," said senior Marjorie Valdez, a four year band veteran. "We had always won before, so I guess I just expected it to happen again."

Even though the band did not advance to further competition, it did receive a superior rating from the judges.

Band director Rodney Klett said that there was "much difficulty" in this year's routine, and that the band had "too many little mistakes throughout the show."

In September, twirlers Charlotte Walker, Lisa Sykora, Tracy Thies, Staci Kasper, Kim Olson, and Tabatha Gentry received a superior rating on their ensemble routine at the UIL twirling competition. Charlotte, Lisa and Tracy earned superior ratings for individual performances, and Staci, Tabatha, and Kim earned excellent ratings.

Seniors Brandon White, Max Werkenthin, and Trey Ramsay, and junior Sara Russell qualified at the district and regional levels to try out for the All-State Band. Sara, who played the clarinet, was selected.

In addition to competitions, twelve band members were invited to be guest players at the University of Texas-Brigham Young football game, and performed at halftime ceremonies in Memorial Stadium in Austin.

The turkey dinner in February, and the dessert concert in March helped the band collect funds to pay for trips to Fort Worth to compete in the Texas Music Educators Association contest, and to Tennessee, where the band competed in a national contest.

MUSIC MAN: Senior Trey Ramsay plays his baritone saxophone during the halftime show of the San Antonio game at Eagle Field.

SANTA: Band director, Mr. Rodney Klett, plays his trumpet along with band students at the Christmas Stroll on the Courthouse lawn.

Let the music begin

As anyone in band could attest, successes did not come easily.

Most of the students were required to attend sectionals, a rehearsal of all brass or all woodwind instruments, and a private lesson with a director. Those extra practices usually kept students after school almost every day of the week.

"Dedication is the name of the game, not only for the student, but for the director as well," said senior Jim Collier. "They spend countless hours creating marching shows, making schedules for competitions, and mending uniforms."

In the fall, students had individual competitions at the UIL level. They included solo, ensemble, and district and region.

At the UIL district contest in April, the symphonic band received an overall score of "2" in the concert division. The honors band received an overall score of "1" for their concert performance.

In the spring, the band attended the Opryland American Music Festival in Nashville, Tenn., competing with bands from all over the nation.

At the Music Festival the Honors

Band received a rating of "1" and took first place in their division for their performance at the Roy Acuff Theatre.

"The trip to Tennessee was a blast," said senior Marjorie Valdez. "I think that it was neat to compete at a national level, and visit new places, especially Graceland."

In May the band won the State Wind Ensemble contest at the University of Texas receiving outstanding ratings for their recorded performance tapes.

SPORTS

Let's Get Rolling

Cross-country, volleyball, and football kicked off the year. The JV cross-country boys won district, while the girls ran impressive races. The volleyball team surprised everyone and made it to the playoffs. Although they had only two wins, the football team had several members on the all-district team.

Next came basketball, soccer, and swimming. Neither varsity basketball team had a winning season, but each placed three members on the all-district team. Soccer kept kicking with several close and exciting games. Meanwhile, swimming had the most impressive season as they sent fifteen people to regionals and set three new school records.

The year ended with powerlifting, tennis, baseball, track, and golf. The powerlifting team won its first Georgetown meet and sent five to the state meet. Baseball competed tough against district opponents and defeated state-ranked Westwood. The tennis, track, and golf teams, although more individualized, worked together and had impressive seasons.

And so another year of sports came to an end. We kicked, we caught, we threw, we shot, we ran, we fought, and even though we didn't always win, we never forgot that Eagle Fight Never Dies!

Cross Country

Cross country is a lonely sport. Just ask Rich Ninness, the only member of the varsity team.

Rich ran as the solo varsity competitor all year, while the freshmen and junior varsity boy's teams outpaced every other team in the district for the district championship.

"We had a great season with a strong finish," said Coach Mark Townsend. "Just wait until next year. We'll be great in '88."

Coach Terry Michalka called freshmen Constance Harry "our most valuable runner" due largely to the fact that Constance placed third or higher in every meet.

The girls team competed in the Milano, Seguin, Austin, San Marcos, Killeen Ellison, and Round Rock meets. Constance paced the team to a third place finish in San Marcos, and a third place finish in the Killeen Ellison meet.

Coach Michalka had high praise for runners Amanda Braun and Amy McKenna. Amy placed fifth at Killeen, and Gloria Salazar took eighth.

AND THEY'RE OFF: Rick Harney, Scott Wilson, and Robert Cruz set out for the long miles ahead during the district meet where they outpaced every other team.

Volleyball

As the first Eagle team to go to playoffs in 5A, the varsity volleyball team proved bigger isn't necessarily better.

Beginning the year with only eight players, each girl knew from the start that the road to success would not be easy.

The varsity team ended the season with a 13-4 record, losing only to state-ranked Round Rock twice, Westlake and Westwood, and in a tie for second place in the district.

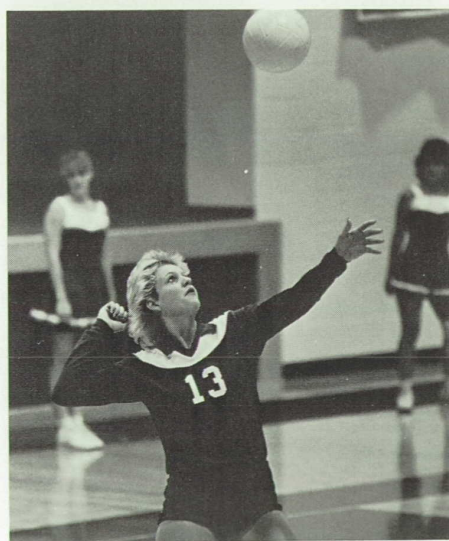

"We had to work very hard, but it was worth it in the end," said senior Amy Varnell.

Due to health problems, veteran coach Molly Frazier left the helm Sept. 25, and assistant coach Sue Davidson took over.

"The team learned from their mistakes," said Coach Davidson. "They worked hard and tried their very best."

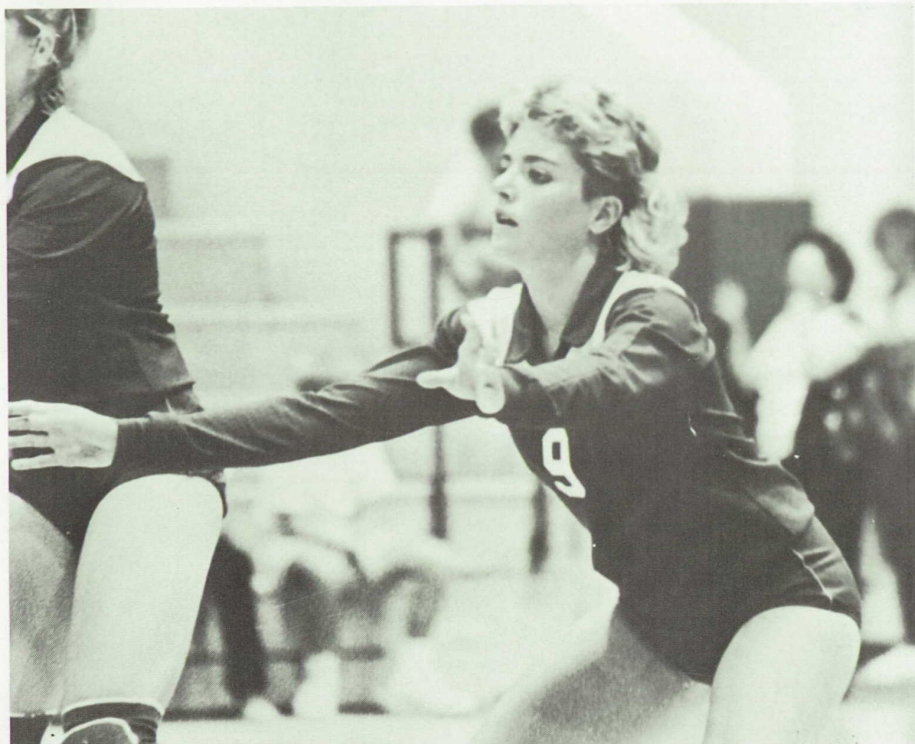

Senior Krystal Hanson was chosen to the first team all district, and Lori White and Hyla Hundley were picked for the

The junior varsity team blasted into the season winning 11 of their first 13 games. Then, after some girls moved up to varsity, finished the season with a respectable 11-5 district and a 20-7 overall record.

"I felt like we had a very successful season," said Coach Sylvia Schooley. "The girls worked very hard and improved greatly."

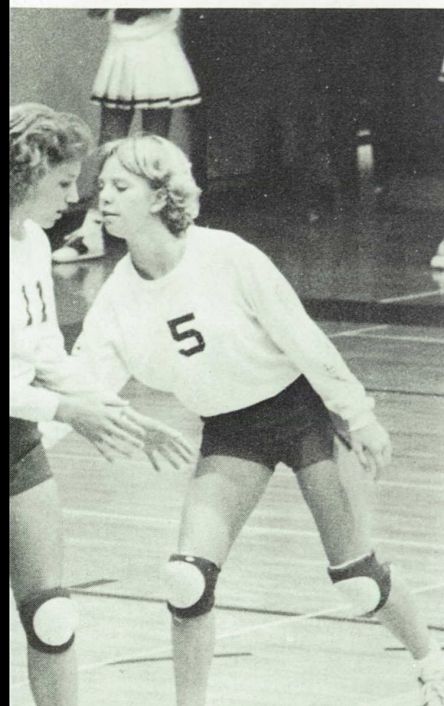

Highlights of the freshmen seasons included winning the Westlake Tournament and beating Westwood in the finals of the Georgetown Tournament to win first, according to Coach Sherry Rhoads.

"The most exciting match was against undefeated Round Rock," said Coach Rhoads. "These girls have a lot of potential and if they stick together, they should go far by the time they are seniors."

The freshman blue team ended the season with a 22-6 record and a third place in the district.

The white team finished the year with an 8-7 record in district, and 19-8 overall.

"I really enjoyed coaching these girls," said Coach Rhoads. "They mean a lot to me."

Determination and pride tell the story of the Eagles in their second year of 5A play. The official record showed the varsity finished with a 2-8 season. Even though the Eagles only recorded one win during regulation play, because of a forfeiture by Waco, due to an ineligible player on their team, the record books were altered. The varsity started play with an unfortunate loss to 4-A powerhouse Taylor. Senior quarterback Mark Ramos gained 90 yards on 17 carries, adding to 150 yards total rushing. The Eagles only score was a 14 yard run by senior Victor Donahey.

The varsity travelled to Killeen for the district opener. Senior quarterback Koby Kielman came off the bench to complete two passes for 20 yards. He went in to replace Ramos, who had been injured early in the game. After losing to Round Rock, the Eagles came up against San Antonio Edison to try and pull off a win for Homecoming.

The Eagles started the game alive and fighting. They held San Antonio to only seven points in the first three quarters. The last 12 minutes proved to be devastating as San Antonio scored 20 unanswered points to shutout the Eagles 27-0. After this four game dry spell, the varsity travelled to Copperas Cove to knock off the Bulldogs 23-6. Junior Brian Anderson blocked a Cove punt and ran in a 20-yard touchdown run to seal the final score.

"We made the big plays, and we didn't kill ourselves by giving them up," said Head Coach Art Briles.

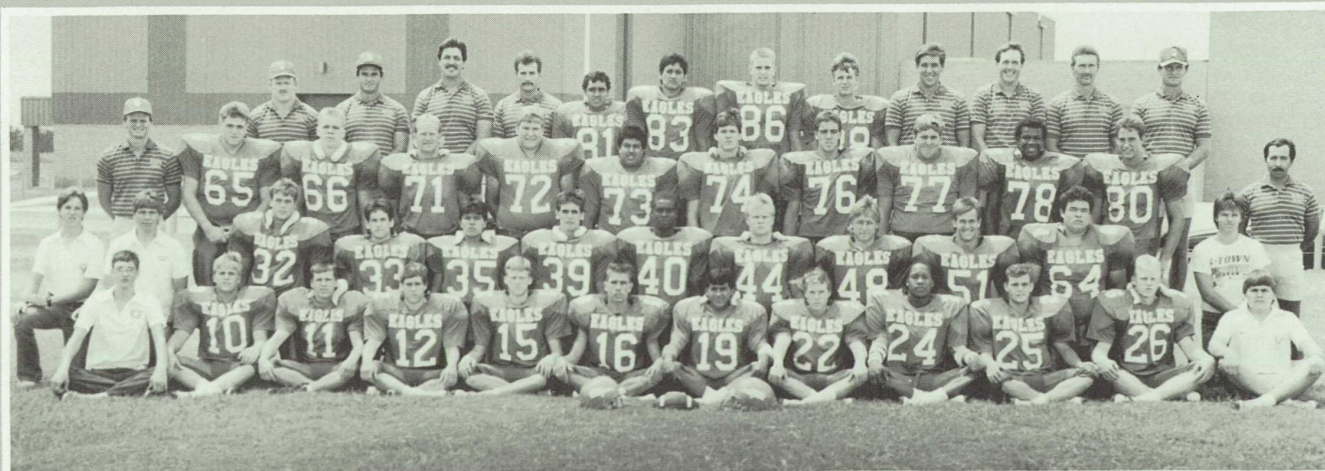

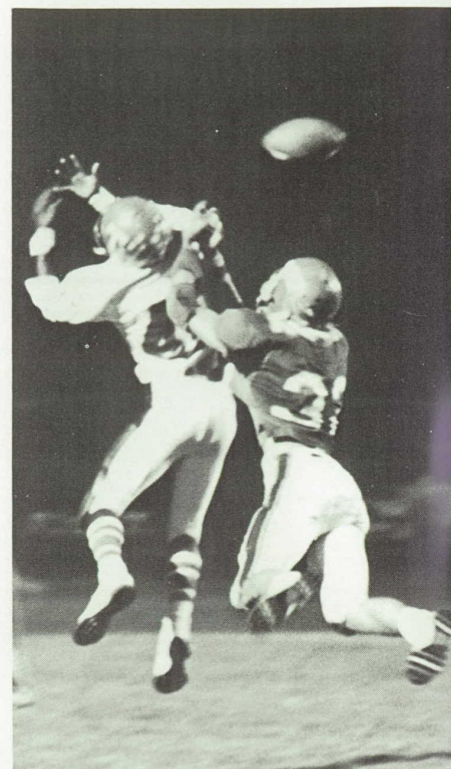

Spirits were high as the Eagles played Westwood. The Eagles led at the half 17-15. The crowd's intensity seemed to rub off on the team. For the second half, the fans formed a "spirit chain" for the team to run through. It became a tradition for the rest of the season.

"It's the best game we've played for a year and a half," said Coach Briles.

Although at the end of the season the Eagles had only logged one win, the losses came after hard fought confrontations with much larger teams.

JV rolls to two district wins Football

Even when times were tough, the junior varsity team stuck together.

They started the year with 17 players, but as the year went on, Brian Anderson, Trey Christianson, and J.T. Eli moved up to varsity. Nick Johnson, Calley Poarch, and Jonah Yokubaitis, members of the sophomore team, moved up to replace them.

The J.V. team ended the season with a disappointing 2-8 record.

"The thing that stands out most in my mind is the Killeen Ellison game," said quarterback Calley Poarch. "It was a nip and tuck game; we were behind for the better part of three quarters. We drove down the field three times in the fourth quarter and came up short twice. On the third drive, we punched it in from three yards out to make the score 6-6 with 1:15 remaining. Sax and Jim Bob pulled off a miraculous extra point conversion to win the game."

The whole season had many personal and team successes according to Calley. "I feel like the whole team came a long way over the whole season," he said. "We never gave up."

The two Eagle wins were recorded against district rivals Killeen Ellison (7-6) and Copperas Cove (21-6).

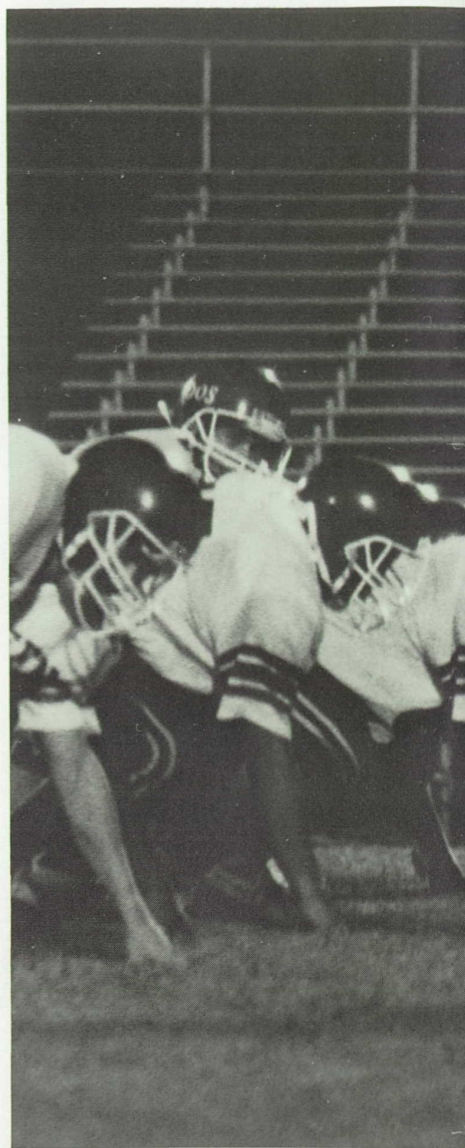

Junior Brent Saxon said, "We worked very hard on and off the field. We did our very best in every game and worked hard to make Georgetown proud of us."

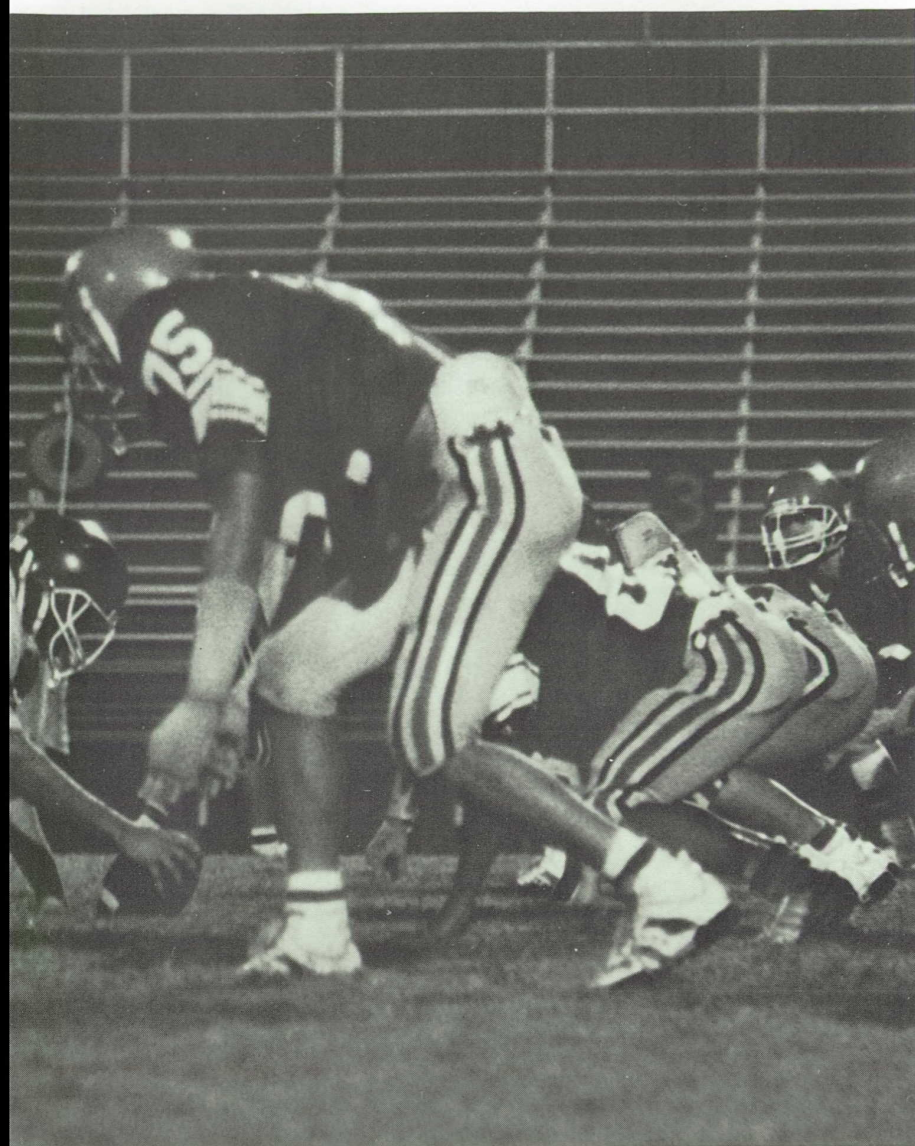

GOOD FORM: Junior Ken Crerend helps junior varsity kicker Brent Saxon practice his form before kicking the extra point at the Westwood game.

With an impressive 3-0 beginning record, with wins against McCallum, Killeen, and Round Rock, it looked as if the sophomore team had a good chance to win it all.

However, in the next game Travis disappointed the Eagles by shutting them out 21-0.

The sophomore and junior varsity teams combined against Copperas Cove, and gave the new J.V. team their first win. The following week, however, the sophomore team went once again on their own and lost to Killeen Ellison. The last win of the season came at home on Eagle Field against Westwood with an exciting 35-13 result.

Before the sophomores combined once again with the J.V., they lost to Westlake, 7-6.

The combined J.V. and sophomores played against Temple and Waco to round out the season with a 4-3 overall record.

Brent Barton and Michael Rose led the sophomores in rushing and in scoring and Chuck Davis and Herb Kunz were quarterbacks for the Eagles and had productive seasons.

Outstanding defensive players for the sophomore team were Jack Funk, Jay Foster, and Earl Wood.

"This year's sophomores have a lot of potential and will really help the varsity in the next few years to come," said sophomore coaches Bruce Webb and Paul Parsons.

The freshman teams shot for a goal and while they never quite attained it, improved while reaching toward it. The freshman A team ended with a 2-8 record and the freshman B team with a 3-7 record.

PASS IT TO ME: Senior Kelly Rosckes passes the basketball to senior Amy Remmert for an assist against Giddings.

Junior Tamara Marburger dribbled down the court in a last minute attempt to score for the Lady Eagles. There were eight seconds left in the fourth quarter, but in order to deceive the other team, a Georgetown parent screamed out "three, two, one!" Tamara, not knowing how much time was left, used all her strength in a shot from half court, but was unsuccessful.

Everyone in the entire gym was shocked at first and then doubled over in laughter. Tamara was beet red from embarrassment.

"After I threw the ball, I looked at the clock," said Tamara, "I didn't know what to do so I just stood there and laughed with everyone else."

The entire season for the varsity girls seemed to be one last-minute attempt after another.

"We were a fourth-quarter team," said senior Amy Varnell. "We'd be behind until the end, then try to come up and win. Sometimes it worked, others it didn't."

But, when it did work, it worked great. Coach Cathy Sefcik's Lady Eagles placed second in the Round Rock Tournament and received runner-up consolation in the prestigious Austin Tourney.

Senior Kristin Curtis led the Eagles defensively with 102 steals, while teammate senior Kelly Rosckes blocked 33 shots. Junior Alicia Gordon and senior Amy Remmert pulled down 158 and 150 rebounds, respectively.

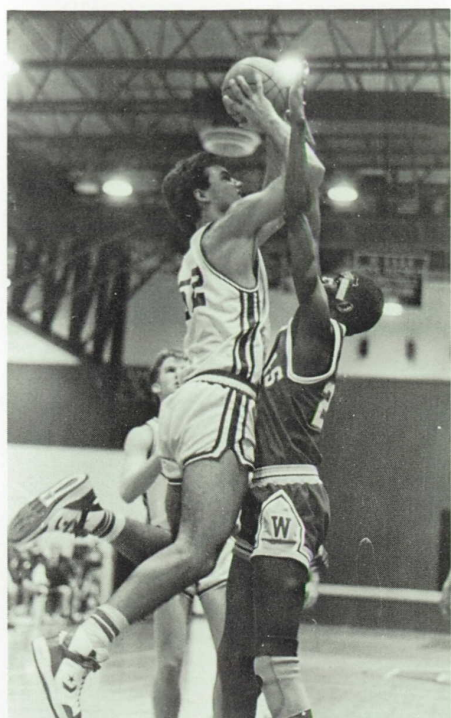

The 12-17 Lady Eagles placed three members on the all-district team. Kristin received first team honors, Amy placed on the second team and Bianca Rodriguez was awarded an honorable mention.

Through all of the 7:30 a.m. practices, the girls still had fun.

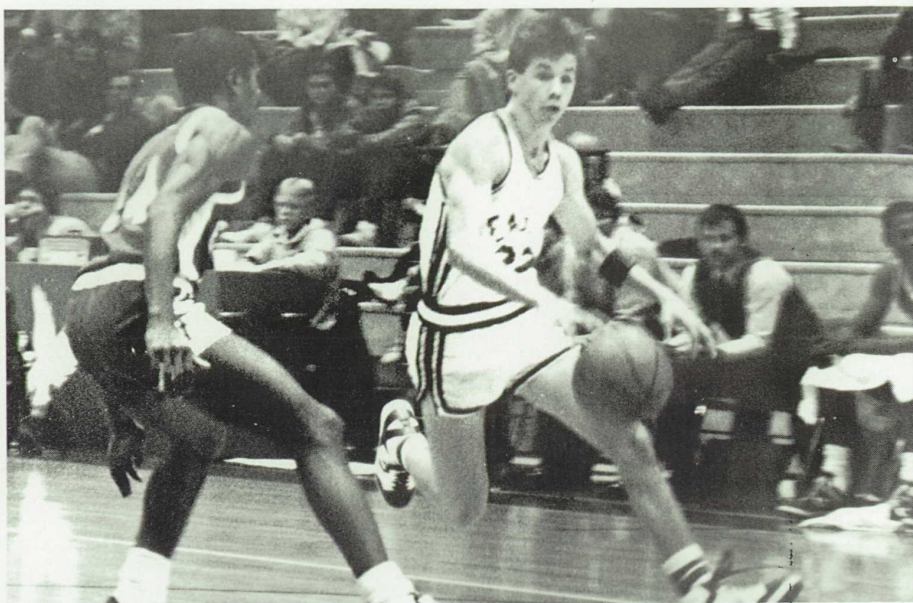

"I like being part of a team," said Bianca, "It gives me a sense of belonging and it helps me push myself for the cause of the team."

Tournament win gets the ball rolling Basketball

Defeating district powerhouse Round Rock three times and winning the Belton Tournament highlighted an otherwise frustrating season for the boys varsity basketball team.

"We were in the running in all of our games until the final buzzer except for three games," said head boys basketball coach Maurice Varnell.

The 13-18 varsity Eagles placed three players on the all-district team and won the Belton Tournament. The team voted junior Daniel Mishler as Most Valuable Player and he was designated to second team all-district. The team captain senior Matt Thomas received honorable-mention as did fellow senior Mark Cumberland.

Leading scorer for the boys was Daniel Mishler with 431 total points and a 13.9 average per game. Once again, junior Kevin Hunt led his team in free throws with an 88 percentage from the line, and Matt Thomas pulled down 192 rebounds, averaging 5.9 per game. Also, senior point-guard Eric Messing stole 44 balls and passed his way to 83 assists.

The guys averaged 59 points a game in district as opposed to 63 for our opponents.

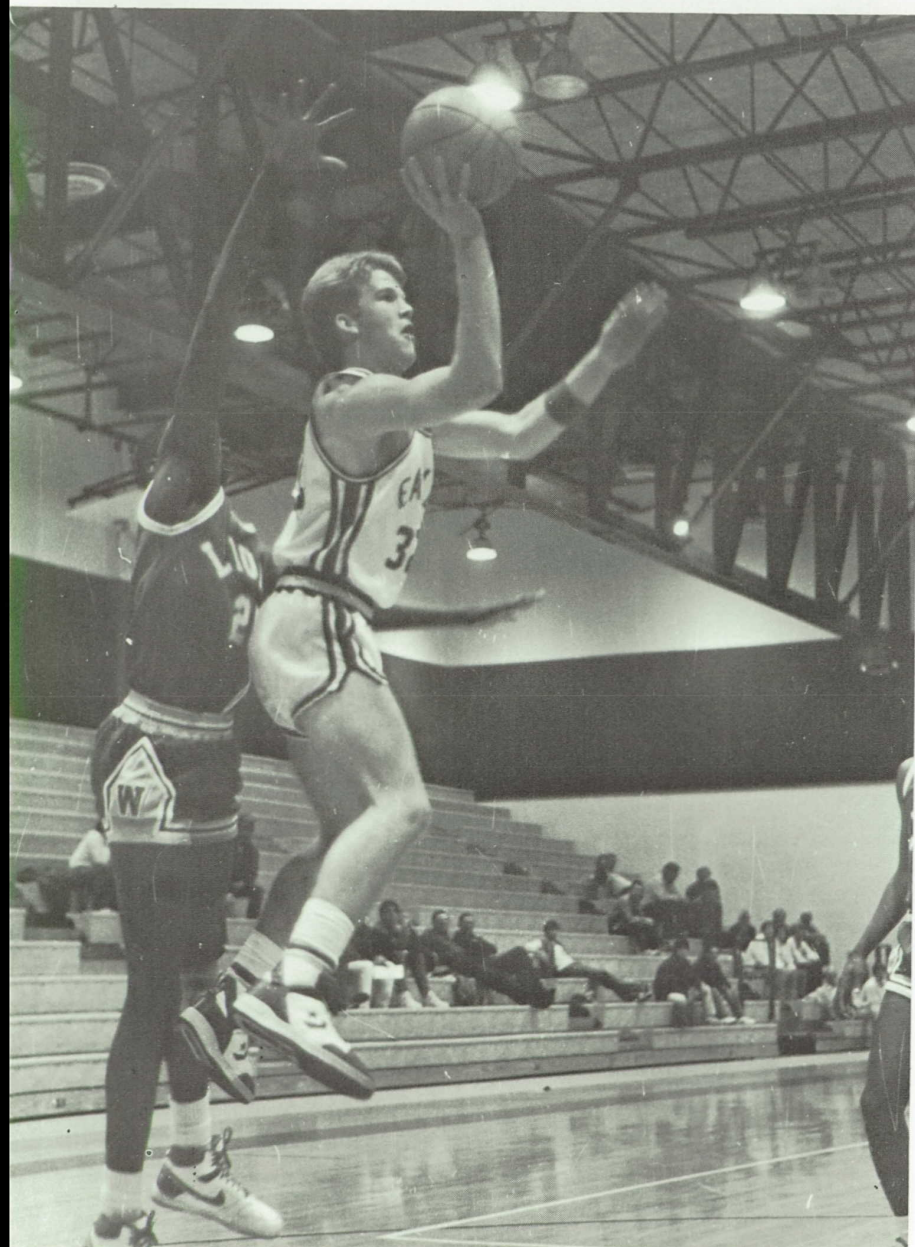

"All in all I was definitely satisfied with our efforts and dedication," said Coach Varnell. "This team ranks higher than some of the previous district champions in their work habits and perserverance. I was real proud of this group."

Beginning on top and staying that way told the story of the J.V. girls basketball team. Ending up second in 5A ball is no easy task and their record was 20-6 overall and 13-3 in district.

The Lady Eagles also scored big in tournaments by placing third in the Round Rock Tourney and receiving consolation in the Temple Tournament. Leanne Cole earned a prestigious place on her team as high scorer with an average of 16 points a game and best offensive player. Teammates Heather Keeling, Shelly Lilley, Carrie Stockton and Barbara Waznik were also cited as having productive seasons by their coach Sylvia Schooley.

"My team was awesome," said Schooley, "so what can I say?"

In "the toughest district in the state" as it was called by Coach Sam Bell, the J.V. boys beat everybody in 14 5A at least once. The boys competed in the Westlake and Leander Tournaments and captured first in both of them.

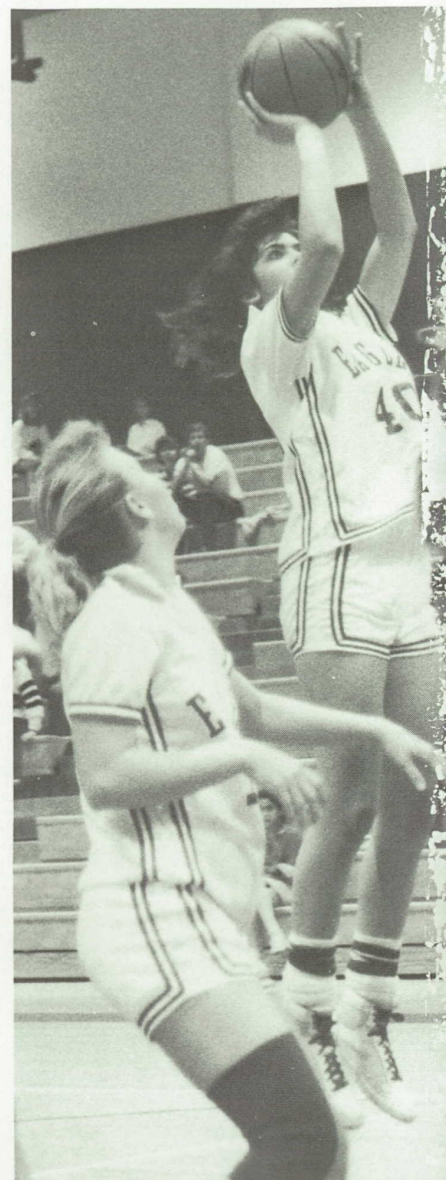

David Montalvo led the 16-12 Eagles in scoring with an average of 14 points a game and a total of 125 rebounds. Scott Peak was also credited as having a great defensive season with the highest number of steals.

Both freshman girls teams had winning seasons with a 10-6 A-team and a 12-4 B-team. Desiree Warren paced the A-team Lady Eagles with 214 total points and 135 rebounds and B-team high scorer was Tina Miller with 219 points and 148 rebounds. The quick defensive players for the A and B teams were Mona Parker with 75 steals and Stacey Chilton with 55 steals, respectively.

Coaches Paul Parsons and Mike Horn both felt that their freshman boys teams "improved markedly over the course of the season." The A-team's John Selle and Lance Hughes had great seasons by scoring 430 and 564 total points in that order. The B-team's Rick Harney was proclaimed most outstanding player on his team by Coach Parsons. The A-team's record was 16-12 and the B-team's was 7-15.

Runners keep rolling Track

It's the last event of the meet, the 1600 meter relay. The final runner for Georgetown rounds the last curve, gaining on the frontrunner. This kind of suspense could only be caused by a track meet.

The boys track and field team provided the excitement as they gave an all-out effort for the season.

"It was a very good effort by all members of both track teams," Coach John Baskin said. "They worked hard both in practice and at the meets."

A new school record of eight minutes twenty-five seconds was set in the two mile relay by freshman Rick Harney, juniors Allan Johns and Brett Sweet and freshman Scott Wilson.

We have a very strong nucleus of juniors and freshmen coming back next year that should make for a very strong JV and Varsity," Coach Baskin said. "Most everybody competed in three or more events which makes for a very long day at the track meet. The kids gave 100% and that's all that can be asked of anyone."

"This was a great year for the Eagle track teams," said Coach Sue Davidson. "It was a lot of fun and very exciting."

Sophomore Leanne Cole qualified for the regional track meet in the high jump. She also qualified as alternate in 400 meters.

Other alternates included Nicole Porch, who was the team's most valuable player, in triple jump, Alicia Gordon in shot put, and Cindy Moerhing, in high jump.

The girls ran in six meets, including district. The varsity came in sixth in the Austin meet, eighth in the Westlake meet, third against Leander, second against Round Rock, and first, (until the meet was rained out) in Pflugerville. In district competition, the freshmen came in fourth and the varsity placed fifth.

"We ran a lot better than most of the cschools in the district," said Coach Davidson.

Tennis

When it comes to one on one (or two on two, as in the case of doubles) tennis teams proved they could compete with the best of them.

While no district championships came the way of the tennis teams, no team finished the season lower than fourth, and varsity player Tiffany Hardage found herself state-ranked.

The varsity and JV tennis teams won the Spring Invitational Tennis Tournament at the Eagle tennis courts with 25 team points.

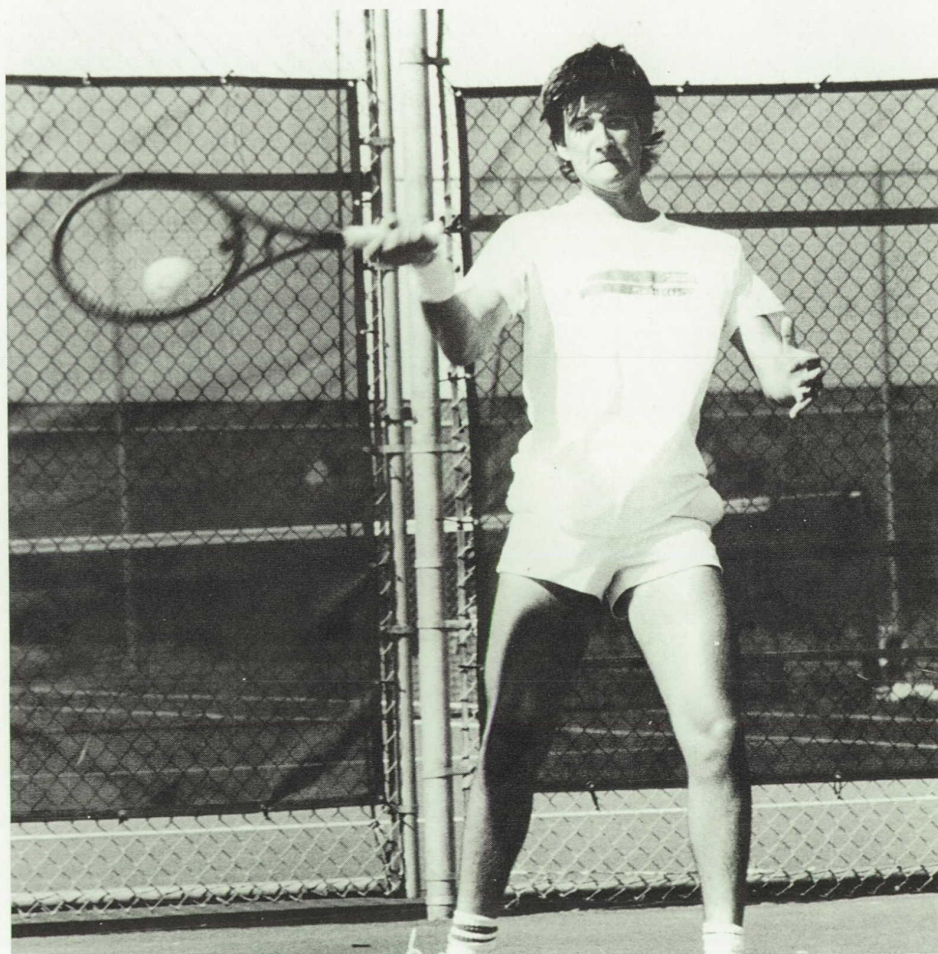

The varsity women's doubles team of Tiffany Hardage-Wendy Calta won first and the men's doubles team of Steven Miller-Matt Grimm won second at the tournament. The junior varsity doubles team of Shane Holmes-Matt Helbert won the championship match, Kim Paggi-Valerie Praesel won first place in women's doubles, and Tim Boles-Brad Revering advanced to the semi-finals in men's doubles.

The varsity team placed third in district behind Westlake and Westwood.

The junior varsity ended the season with the girls taking second and the boys taking third in district.

The freshmen ended with the girls in fourth place in district and the boys in third.

ALMOST THERE: Senior Paul Christie dribbles the ball toward the other team's goal while being pursued by an opponent.

The most popular sport in the world moved a little closer to that status locally as we fielded three boys and two girls soccer teams for the first time.

The varsity boys had a rough season in a very competitive district, but did manage to win second place in the Killeen Tournament.

"We had a disappointing season," said fullback George Velten. "We had good players with good skills, but we couldn't put it together to have a good team."

Many players gave outstanding individual performances. Senior halfback Shane Stark made the all-district first team and was named by coaches as the Most Valuable Player. Junior Cory Conner and senior Paul Christie were selected to the all-district second team. Honorable mention went to junior Martin Lindsey and sophomore Chris Dossett.

The JV teams fared a little better than the varsity. With a record of 6-5, the JV had an average season. With a record of 8-2-1, and the JV B, made up of freshmen, had an impressive winning record.

"The teams we played were a lot tougher than we were, but we managed to work hard and end up winning," said freshman Frank Litterst.

"All in all we did pretty decent," sophomore JV team member Bubba Lozano. "The future's bright."

JV girls take second place Soccer

With only one loss on their otherwise unblemished record, the JV girls boasted the best season of any team on campus.

The girls soccer program grew to two teams for the first time. As the sport continued to grow in popularity, a JV team had to be created.

"The JV girls got second in district. We were undefeated until the last game when we lost to Westwood," JV halfback DeeDee McMaster said. "Although we were disappointed with our loss, we were pleased with the overall turnout."

The varsity didn't fare as well but had some outstanding individual players. Freshman Jenny Rister was chosen to the All-District First Team, seniors Kristin Curtis and junior Becki Kennedy made the All-District Second Team. Most Valuable Player was awarded to senior Jennifer Dial at the Soccer, Golf, and Swimming Banquet.

Players had different opinions of the most exciting soccer occurrences.

"The most exciting thing that happened this year was when Becki Kennedy hit a girl after the Killeen game," varsity halfback Luci Morrow said.

"The most exciting thing that happened this year was when the JV girls beat Westlake on their home turf," JV halfback Shannon Miller said.

Varsity rolls to .500 season Baseball

It could have been described as a roller coaster ride for the varsity baseball team. Highs and lows were ever present. The Eagles beat a team that only a week earlier was ranked fifth in the nation, but finished the season with a disappointing 7-9 record in district.

"Looking back, it's easy to say we should have won more games," Head Coach Bruce Katt said. "But with no returning pitchers back from the varsity, I guess you could say that .500 is pretty good."

The Eagles finished the year with 13 wins and 13 losses overall. After the season was over, three Eagles garnered first team all-district honors. Third baseman Eric Geigley, center fielder Mark Ramos, and right fielder Brian Anderson were the three Eagles placed on the first team. Catcher Victor Donahey and first baseman Brian Martinez were given second team all-district honors, and shortstop Daniel Mishler was given honorable mention honors.

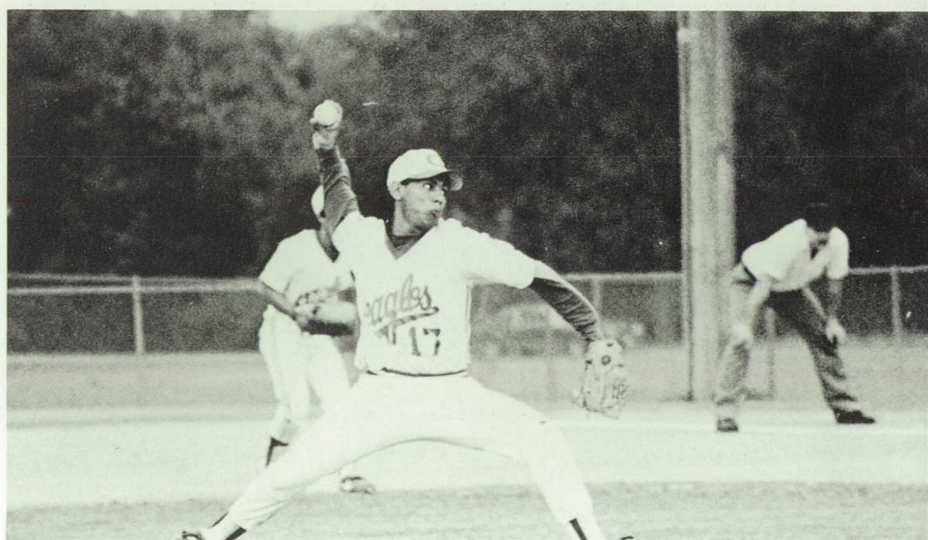

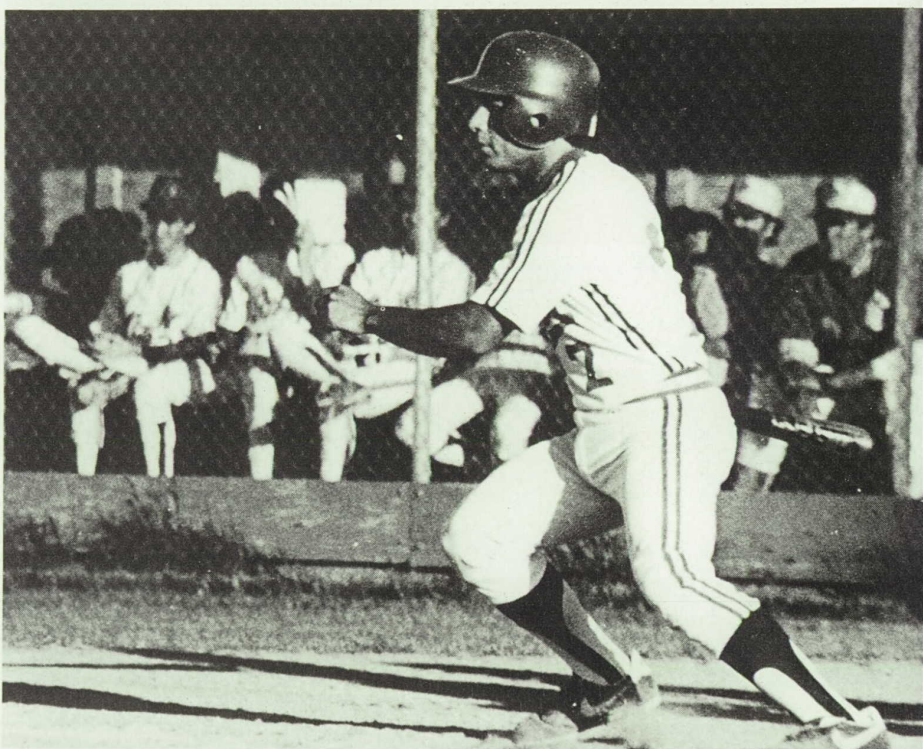

The Eagles hit .311 as a team but had an earned run average of 7.15, and averaged eight walks per game.

The Eagles' biggest win came over district powerhouse Westwood with a score of 11-15. Junior Dario Valdez went the whole way on the mound and Donahey contributed a late inning grand-slam to seal the victory.

WHAT FORM: Pitcher Dario Valdez shows his stuff on the mound. He had the highest winning record of all the Eagle pitchers.

"Victor's two game winning grand-slams were definitely memorable," Katt said. "The way we hit the ball all year was also a high point, and the play of our infield was exceptional throughout the year."

READY, SET, GO: Senior Brian Martinez prepares to steal a base and get one step closer to bringing in a run. Brian was named to the second team all-district.

SAFE AT LAST: Right fielder Brian Anderson slides into the base as his opponent prepares to catch the ball. Brian made the first team all-district.

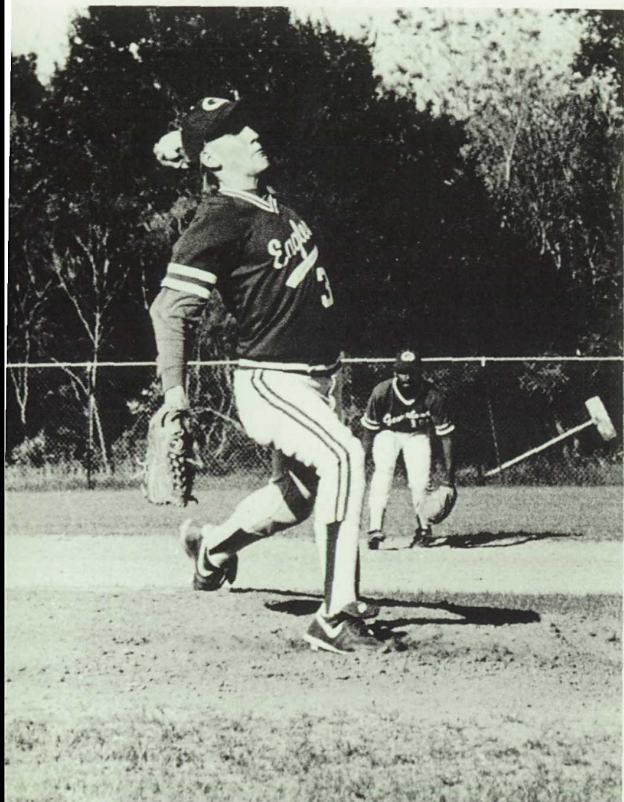

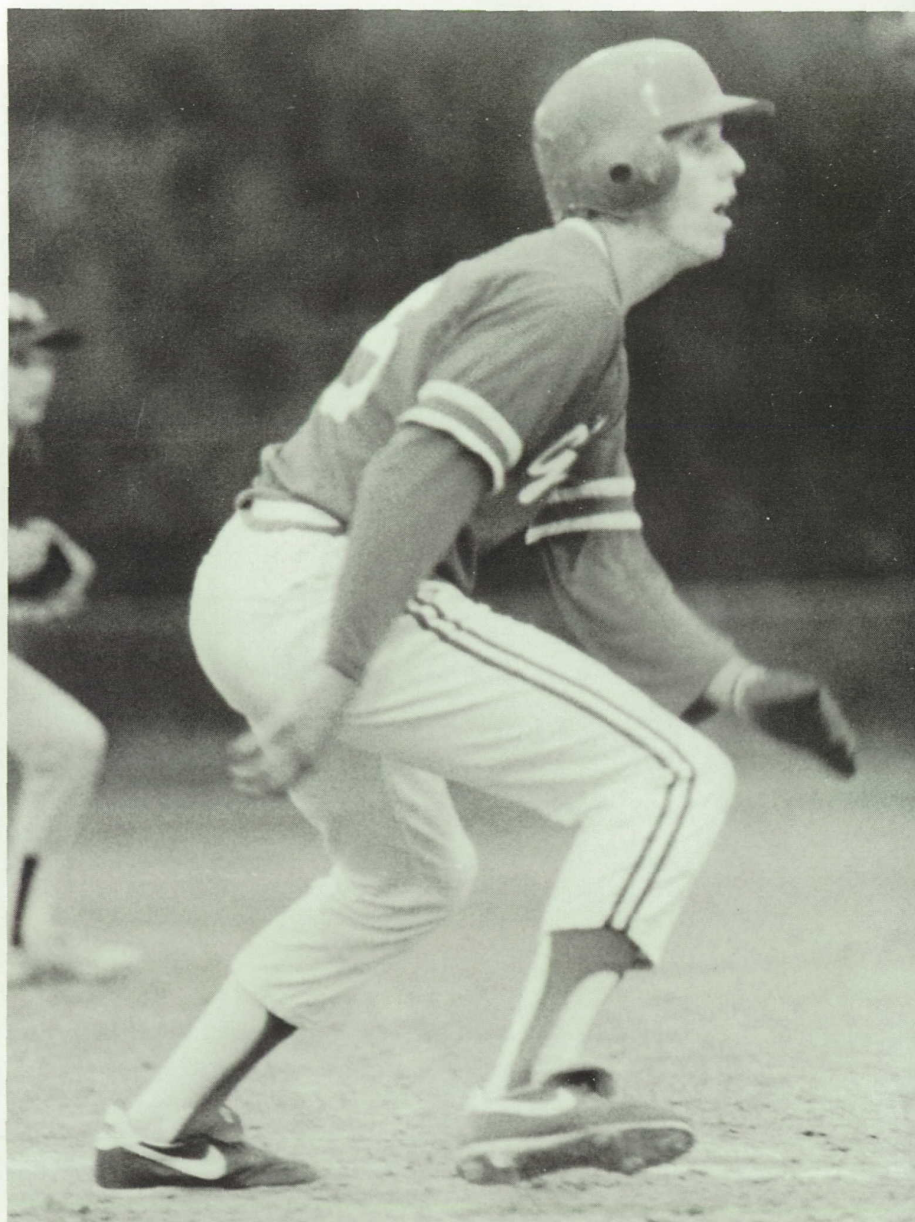

WELCOME HOME: Teammates congratulate center fielder Mark Ramos after he hit a homerun during a Friday night district game. Mark was named to first team all district.

JV posts winning season

Baseball

"Interesting."

That's how junior varsity baseball
Coach Bruce Webb described their season.

"Our team was young, and we gave them a lot of free runs," Webb said.

The JV team finished the season with an overall record of 14-12. Their district 5A record was 7-9.

Although Coach Webb considered baseball a team sport, he did claim to having some outstanding players.

"Lamont Navarette did a good job for a freshman. Mark Davies, Michael Rose, and David Harry did good, too," Webb said. "Several young pitchers did a good job. Those are just a few players that contributed."

Coach Webb seemed excited about next year's teams.

"There's a good group of sophomores that should be able to help varsity next year," Webb said.

Junior Jeff Martin had the highest batting average of .440 for the JV team. Junior David Hearne had the highest runs batted in. He brought in 24 scoring batters.

Hearne also had the most homeruns of the team. He hit three for the year.

Roll with the Waves Swimming

Although no swimmers qualified for the state meet, the swim team sent 13 members in 11 events to regionals at the University of Texas Swim Center capping a record breaking year.

Successes did not come easily. Swimmers arrived at Southwestern University indoor pool at 7:20 in the morning beginning Sept. 8 to practice swimming and receive instructions from Coach Michelle Crider, who resigned at the end of the season to start a family.

Swimmers broke four school records. Ty Hickman broke the 100 butterfly record with a time of 1:00.31. Wendy Perkins trimmed the old 100 backstroke record with 1:12.59, the 400 meter relay team of Hickman, Kyle Yandle, Matt Knowles, and Hans Yandle recorded 3:46.99, and senior Duncan Harden swam a 2:30.0 to set a new 200 individual medley record.

Julie Crawford, Kara Pennington, Brenda Brietschoph, Travis Mitchel, Duncan Harden, Robert Cruz, Kim Wentreck, Dusti Harris and Brad Sibley also qualified for the regional meet.

GO TEAM GO: Sophomores Lisa Ladd and Julie Crawford root for their teammates to finish ahead of other competitors.

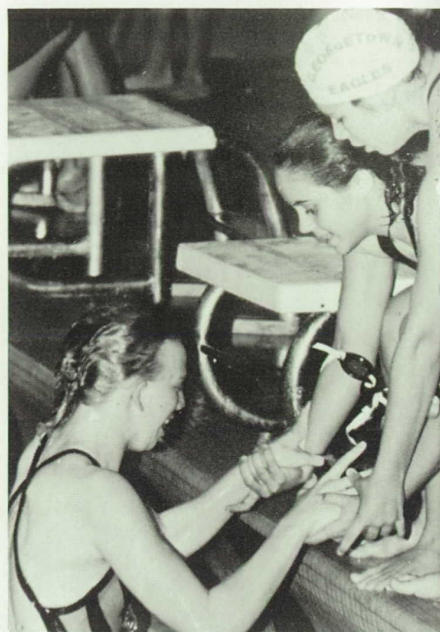

BREATHLESS: Filling his lungs with air, sophomore Mark Robinson gets near the end of the lap.

"We had a good strong team this year," said Coach Crider. "I am very pleased with the four school records we broke."

Most Valuable Player awards went to Julie Crawford and Ty Hickman.

HELPING HANDS: Sophomore swimmers Brenda Breitschopf and Julie Crawford give Wendy Perkins a lift up after her event.

AND HE'S OFF: Sophomore Tim Shanahan launches into a backstroke at a swim meet.

At 105 pounds, Dena Stephenson might remind some people of the dainty helpless ladies of old.

Don't let her hear you say that.

Dena won the only state championship for the Eagles this year in a sport most people would never dream of associating her with. Powerlifting.

"I got involved in powerlifting because I was in the right place at the right time," said Dena. "One day I was in the weight room lifting, just because I like to stay in shape, and Coach Briles came in and encouraged me to be on the team."

At the state meet in Wimberly, Dena set two state records in the squat and total number of pounds lifted for her weight class.

The boys team proved they were not slouches either. In the three district meets, the guys brought home two first place trophies, and one second place award, and qualified 13 for regional competition. At the regional meet in Temple, they won third place, and qualified four members for the state meet at Texas A&M University.

Super heavy weight lifters Clint O'Rear and Mike Buchanan, after finishing consistently in the top five in every meet, took 13th and ninth respectively in the state meet.

Herb Kunz took 14th in the 132 pound class.

"I'm really happy with the way all the lifters worked this year," said Coach Jim Ward. "And it really showed in all the meets."

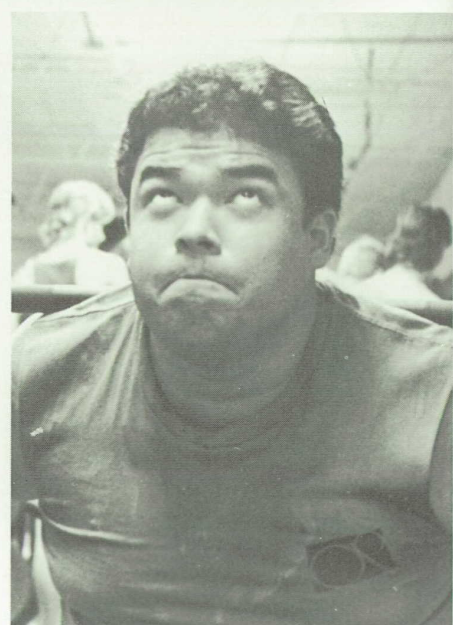

I CAN DO IT: Sophomore Herb Kunz takes his first lift in the state powerlifting meet.

DEAD WEIGHT: Freshman Alfie Jones gives everything he's got to getting the barbell off the ground.

STATE CHAMP: Junior Dena Stephenson sets a state record for her weight class. Dena lifted 225 pounds in the squat competition.

CONCENTRATION: Super heavyweight lifter Mike Buchanan practices for the state meet. Mike lifted 1,425 pounds for a ninth place finish.

First place finishes leave teams Golf rolling in green

When Coach Bob McLeroy took his golf teams to a tournament he almost always brought back a trophy. His boy's team placed at least third in six of eight tournaments, and his girl's team grabbed first in three of five contests.

"Our successes this year came as a result of playing all these young people for the last two years," he said. "We now have experience."

Although the boy's team placed a disappointing fifth in the district tournament, they took first place out of 20 teams at the Georgetown Tournament.

"Winning first at the Georgetown Tournament definitely was the highlight of the season," he said.

Junior Bubba Mullins shot the low score of the tournament with a 72, and was named the most valuable team member.

On the girl's team, junior Christi Calta took top honors with a 77 in the Lampasas tournament. That was the lowest score any girl has shot in six years, and Christi was named the most valuable player.

The girls placed fourth in district.

"I think both teams played well this year," said Coach McLeroy. "We are really looking forward to the 1989 season since only one player is leaving us."

GIRLS GOLF: Shelley Hamilton, Amy Hamllton, Christi Calta, Brandie Anderson, Tamara Marburger.

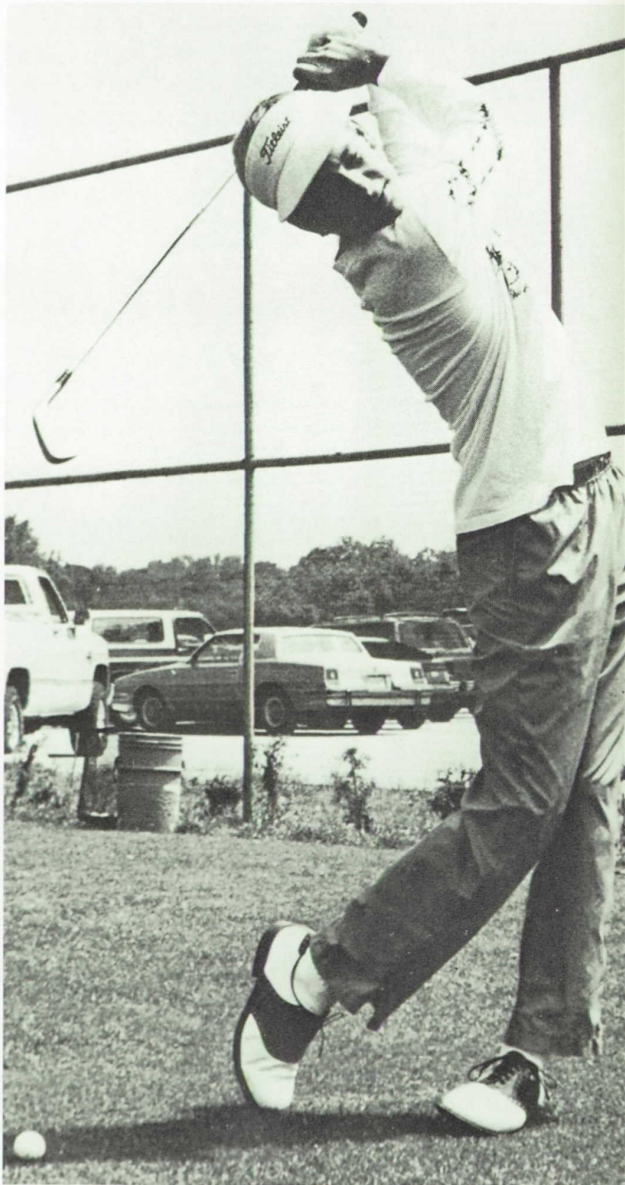

BOYS GOLF: (Front) Bubba Mullins, Robby Ray, Jay Jacob, (Back) Lewis McLeroy, Rod Holley, Hugh Mathews, Bobby Haby, Randy Ray, Daniel Burgeson, Greg Hall, Nathan Webb, Jon Denney.

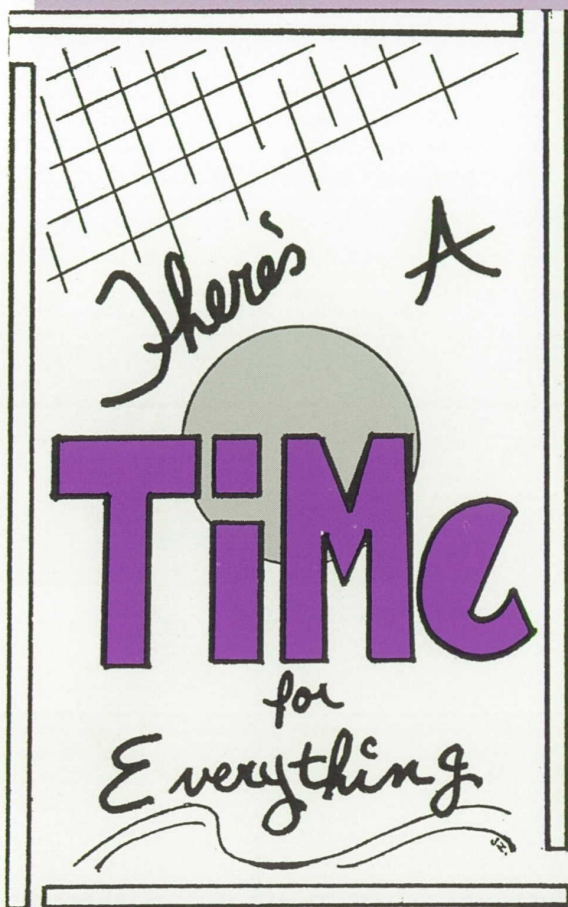

MY TURN: Junior Shelley Hamilton concentrates while practicing her swing at an afternoon practice at the Southwestern golf course. Bubba shot a 72 at the Georgetown Tournament, giving him the best score of the year.

I DID IT: Junior Bubba Mullins shows the correct swing and follow through while practicing at the Southwestern golf course. Bubba shot a 72 at the Georgetown Tournament, giving him the best score of the year.

HERE WE GO: Sophomore Robby Ray readies himself to take a swing while attending one of the many practices that occurred this year.

MR. AND MISS GHS

Everyone looked forward to Feb. 18, because that was the night set aside for royalty. Coronation, a formal, traditional ceremony held every year to announce the winners of the Mr. and Miss GHS contest and class favorites, was held in the multi-purpose complex.

Teachers first chose four senior girls and four senior boys based on their achievements to be the nominees for the honor. The nominees for Miss GHS included Beth Christian, Holly Grimes, Hyla Hundley, and Bianca Rodriguez. Mr. GHS nominees were Curt Barnett, Victor Donahey, Clint O'rear, and Matt Thomas.

The student body then voted to choose the winner. Masters of ceremonies Bobby Thornton and Wendy Hicks gave a summary of the honors and achievements of each nominee.

Amy Hodge and Doug Peak, the 1987 recipients, relinquished their crowns to Bianca Rodriguez and Victor Donahey.

"It is a special honor to be chosen because it shows that you are recognized by both teachers and students," said nominee Holly Grimes.

Bianca Rodriguez and Victor Donahey smile after being named Mr. and Miss GHS.

LUNCH

'Out to lunch' again became a possibility due to a longer lunch period giving students a change from lunch 'at your own risk.'

With a new time schedule, the experiment with short lunches, overlapping periods, and long passing periods ended. The most welcome change was the return of one hour lunches.

"I like it a whole lot better than last year," senior Brant Woodson said. "Thirty minutes just wasn't enough. It gives me more time to go out, and it's safer and results in less wrecks."

Most students were happy with longer lunches, but there were a few who thought they were too long.

"It's too long," freshman Emily Lazek said. "We have nothing to do. I don't have a car."

Despite the complaints, lunch was still a change of pace from the rest of the day, a time to do what one wanted.

SENIOR PANORAMIC

When and where can all seniors get together for a final memory and momento? The senior panoramic picture, of course.

The traditional event once again went off without a hitch.

"I thought it was really fun," Lori White said. "It was great for the seniors to get together one last time and do something as a whole."

There were a few complaints, however. The picture was taken before school, so the seniors had to come to school early. Also, the sun caused an inconvenience.

"I couldn't even look at the camera, it hurt my eyes so much," Amy Remmert said. "I was going like this," (She squinted and shook her head).

As in the years past, seniors tried to find a way to stick out in the crowd with hand gestures, and dress.

"It's just an expression of my goodwill to the universe," Doug McLean said. "I also had, Juanito, my rubber alligator, on my shoulder."

SUMMER

Summer was definitely a change of pace from the rest of the year for most students, but a few had their pace changed dramatically.

Many students went out of town during their vacation, and some went out of the state and even out of the country.

"Last summer I lived near Wuhan in Hubein province China," senior Matthew Johnson said. "It was very different. I learned a little bit of Chinese and ate a lot of weird foods like water buffalo and chicken toes. They're good!"

Others didn't go as far but had unique experiences just the same.

"I worked at National Video in Odessa and went to summer school," senior Erik Poyner said. "I also went to New York and stared at people."

Plans for the coming summer were big in many students' minds as they readied for the life without school.

"I'm applying for a job in the Cayman Islands," senior Chuck Williamson said. "If that falls through, I'll just spend as much of my free time as possible in Mexico, but first I'm going to New York."

"All I did was bum around," said senior Mercy Bryant. "I skied a lot, because the swimming beach was closed. I was almost glad when school started."

MISS ANO NUEVO

Beauty is in the eye of the beholder, and if the beholders saw beauty in these "girls" they must have poor eyesight.

Chi Chi Consuela alias senior Paul Christie was crowned Miss Ano Nuevo 1988 in the annual Spanish Club sponsored event. The competition consisted of talent and evening gown portions.

First runner-up in the pageant was Amber Orail (senior Mike Buck), second Boom Boom Babette (junior Brad Sibley), third Extasy (senior George Velten) and fourth Scarlet O'Hickman (senior Ty Hickman). Prizes also went to Miss Photogenic-Extasy, Miss Congeniality, Vladmira Veercheo O'Rearsky (senior Clint O'Rear); and Most Talented-Willemina Bow-Wow

For the participants, the event opened their eyes to what life as a member of the opposite sex is like.

"I finally got to see what the inside of a girls' restroom looked like," said Paul. "It was really strange having the guy next to you ask if his make-up was okay."

IDENTIFICATION CARDS

What was plastic, had your picture on it and had no obvious use? Why, the new ID cards, of course. And as the year went on the question remained, "When do we start to use these things?"

Student identification cards were distributed to students at the beginning of the year. However, the ID cards were not used very often.

"I've never used it," said senior Kelly McInerney. "It's hidden in my billfold. The picture is so horrifying, I'd never bring it out for anyone to see on purpose."

Some students did use their ID cards for discounts.

"I used mine at a car show and got a discount," said senior Patrick Murphy. "I also used it at a movie theater and at Highland Lanes."

Other students used their ID cards instead of their driver's licenses.

"I used my ID card so I could take my SAT," senior Stephen Gray said.

Some students didn't mind the idea of carrying ID cards, but they did offer suggestions for next year.

"They should be smaller," said senior Lance Weir. "They need to be able to fit in picture holders. If they were about the size of credit cards, they'd be easier to carry."

HOLIDAYS

The holidays represented times of freedom from the daily grind and a chance to escape from school and Georgetown. Yet, many students said their holidays were less than exciting.

"We are staying in Georgetown because all of our relatives live up north," said junior Joell May at Thanksgiving. "Everything is closed, so it's really boring."

"I stayed in Georgetown, because I had to work at Gold's," said senior Wendy Price.

Many students spent their time off in ways they normally could only dream about.

"I slept until about four almost every day, caught up on my soaps, and did as little homework as possible," said junior Claire Russell at Christmas.

Ways to stay active in Georgetown could be a major problem but some found a way to do it.

"I went to the movies a lot, watched the guys play basketball, and watched the Aggies beat Notre Dame," said senior Beth Christian.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

Your face turns red. Your eyes widen. Your body feels like jello. You begin to sweat. Everyone is looking at you. You've been embarrassed.

"I was walking from the parking lot to the school, and I was looking at a car," sophomore Heather DeLeon said. "I ran into a fire hydrant."

Sometimes teachers were the cause of an embarrassing moment.

"Coach Baskin stuck a paper on my back that said 'kiss me please,'" said sophomore Kerri Appleby. "He embarrassed me in front of the whole class."

Most often, however, students did the damage well enough themselves. "One day I was in the darkroom in Photojournalism and I was singing really loud," senior Diane Benner said. "Everyone in class heard me."

Embarrassing moments in front of a lot of people seemed to hurt the most.

"Kyle Pope and I were in Austin one day, and my skirt was caught in the car door," junior Nysa Hardin said. "I had to run along beside the car on Sixth Street."

POWDER PUFF

Girls in football uniforms. Guys in cheerleader and drill team uniforms. Have we slipped into the Twilight Zone? No. It's just time for the powder puff game.

For several weeks, the girls met after school and on weekends with varsity football players as their coaches, to practice for the game November 13.

"Practices every week prepared us for the game," said junior Angie Sprock. "The coaches taught us the basics of how to play football."

New traditions added to the spirit of powder puff. These new additions included a pep rally in the old gym before school and a dance in the Commons with music provided by ICE.

"Powder Puff is a tradition and now the pep rally can make it special," said junior Becky Anderson. "We planned cheers and skits with our cheerleaders and players for the pep rally."

Senior Todd Leach balances a twirling baton on his nose during half-time of the powder puff game. Todd performed as a member of the twirling squad.

MISS GEORGETOWN

Junior Joell May won the Miss Georgetown Commerce pageant March 25 at the Alma Thomas Theater. This year Miss Georgetown was divided into two pageants. One was for seniors and older girls who would go on to Miss Texas pageant. The Commerce pageant was for juniors.

The winners included: Christy Butler, first runner up; Kristi Melton, second runner up; and Aimee Gore, third runner up. Sheri Franklin won Miss Congeniality and Jayna Cherney won the swimsuit competition.

"I thought it was a good idea to split the pageant into two parts," senior Anne Hebert said. "That way Miss Georgetown Chamber of Commerce would be in town to do the duties."

Most people had a favorite part of the pageant.

"I liked the talent the best, they were all nice," said sophomore Tabby Maginnis.

Lots of work and time had to put forth to be in either pageant.

"It really was a good experience," said senior Janet Heilman. "I had a lot of fun being in it."

CONCERTS

Without warning, the lights go off. The crowd pushes forward as sustaining chords ring out from the P.A. system hanging high above. The stage lights up as the music changes. And finally, the band appears and launches into the first song of the night.

Many students attended concerts for different reasons.

"I go for the pure energy that you feel at concerts," said senior Matt Thomas. "I just like seeing my favorite musicians live."

"Bruce Springsteen showed that lots of special effects and lights aren't needed when the performer has talent," said Journalism teacher Donna Przygoda.

Some people didn't like the loud, rowdy atmosphere and chose milder concerts.

"I went to Whitney Houston," said senior Rochelle Collins. "It was nice and enjoyable, not wild."

Even though the prices of some tickets were somewhat expensive, students still chose to attend.

"I paid $21 for my Pink Floyd ticket, but it was worth it," said senior Sundra Schaefer.

While most students just enjoyed seeing and hearing their favorite band live, others saved their money for the concerts they really wanted to see.

"I'm holding my money for the Lawrence Welk concert in the fall," said senior Jim Collier.

NATIONAL VOCATIONAL WEEK

"You can win in the Olympics of Vocational Education."

This was the slogan for Vocational Education Week, February 7-13, sponsored by the vocational department and supported by local businesses. The program was established mainly to recognize the school's vocational program and its accomplishments. To do this an insert for The Georgetown Weekly was produced.

"Mainly we worked on The Georgetown Weekly insert," said teacher Linda Holmstrom. "That took forever."

To gain exposure for the event in the school, students wore buttons proclaiming vocational education gave "the competitive edge."

"We got points added to our six weeks grade for wearing those buttons," said senior Wendy Price.

All in all it was a learning experience for teachers and students in more ways than one.

Pictures were taken of the vocational classes to be put in the insert.

The administrators held a brunch in order to celebrate.

"We had brunch for the administrators and employers," said Mrs. Laura Sue Smith. "The mayor signed a proclamation claiming it National Vocational Week. It's celebrated all over the United States every year."

CLIFF NOTES

Some guy named Cliff helped more people study than anyone else.

Cliff Notes, supplements to the great pieces of literature assigned to students, were very popular as inanimate English tutors. Cliff Notes presented a clear discussion of the action and thought of the work under consideration and a concise interpretation of its artistic merits and its significance.

"They helped me understand the book. I didn't just read them," junior Bobby Thornton said. "I read the book and Cliff Notes together."

The "Key to the Classics" was used by many for help in understanding the themes of the works.

"If there's one part in the book I don't understand," junior Bill Clarke said. "I'll read the Cliff Notes."

And of course, Cliff Notes were not just used as the substitute they were intended to be. Students found that many times they could get by just by reading the Notes.

"If I get real behind and I don't read, I read the Cliff Notes the night before," said junior Jarret Mallon.

BEST FRIENDS

Laughing, crying, understanding, caring, and sharing. That's what best friends are for.

"My best friend is LaDaunn Johnson. She's someone I can confide in," junior Jennifer Lee said. "I really feel comfortable with her, and we are always together."

Some students considered their boyfriends or girlfriends as best friends.

"My best friend is Shane Stark, my boyfriend. We have a lot in common, and we love to be around each other," sophomore Leeann Bednar said. "He is a real funny, joking, and cute person. He's my baby."

The more time best friends spent together, the closer they became.

"My best friend is my girlfriend, Kristi McCoy," sophomore Greg Burnette said. "We've been together for seven months, and I've gotten to know her real well."

Best friends seemed to have a lot in common.

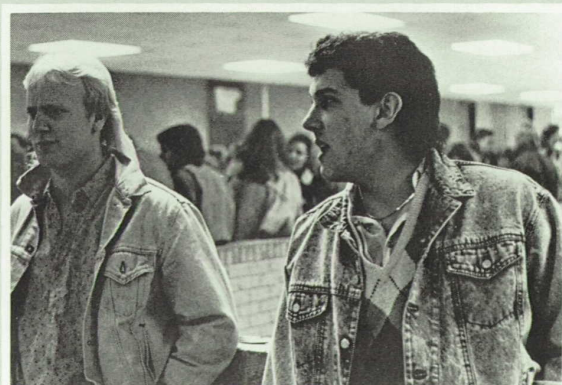

"We're like totally different in some ways, but then we're just alike in others," Amy Johnson said of her friend. "It's like we're each other's moon shadows."

No matter how many arguments best friends had, they still remained friends.

"We never get mad at each other. We just get frustrated, then forget about it," junior Sheri Franklin said.

"If you're trying to find me, then look for Amy Johnson. And if you're trying to find Amy, then look for me. We're practically inseparable. We're the best, best friends."

TALENT SHOW

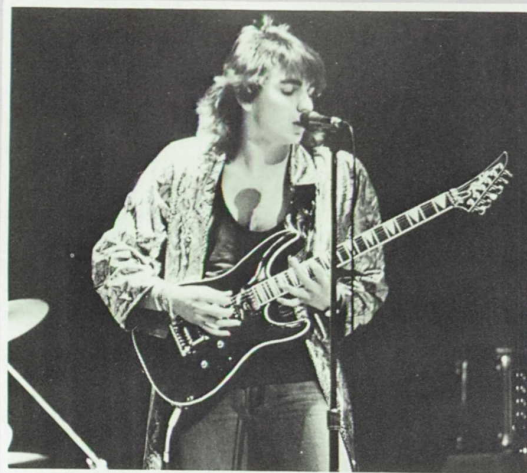

What do heavy metal music, country music, and soft music have in common? The talent show.

Junior Thelayna Hardeman won the individual singing performance at the March 18 annual event, sponsored by the choir. Dora Nemeth took the dancing honor. The band, Odd Mauve Kitty, won the group performance.

"I thought it was good," junior Shelly Hamilton said. "Randy Ray sang in it. I liked that. The bands were good."

Overall, most student agreed this year's talent show was entertaining.

"I liked the heavy metal," junior Brad Cockrell said. "I thought this year's was good."

Spring break '88 provided most people a time to get away from the daily grind and a chance to either travel to exotic places like Mexico or to just soak up rays in the backyard.

"I went to South Padre Island," senior Hyla Hundley said. "Then, I went to Mexico and a club called Bermuda's and had the time of my life."

"I went to Mexico. It was really cool because we met a lot of people from a lot of different places," senior Mercy Bryant said. "I could almost speak the language by the time we left."

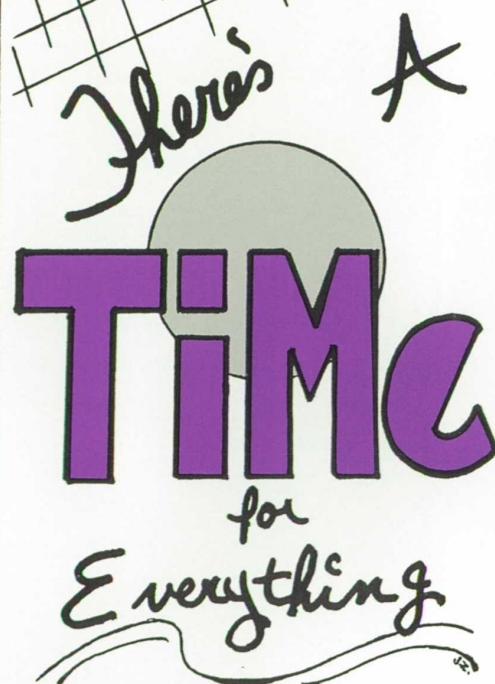

Other students went even further away, in the other direction.

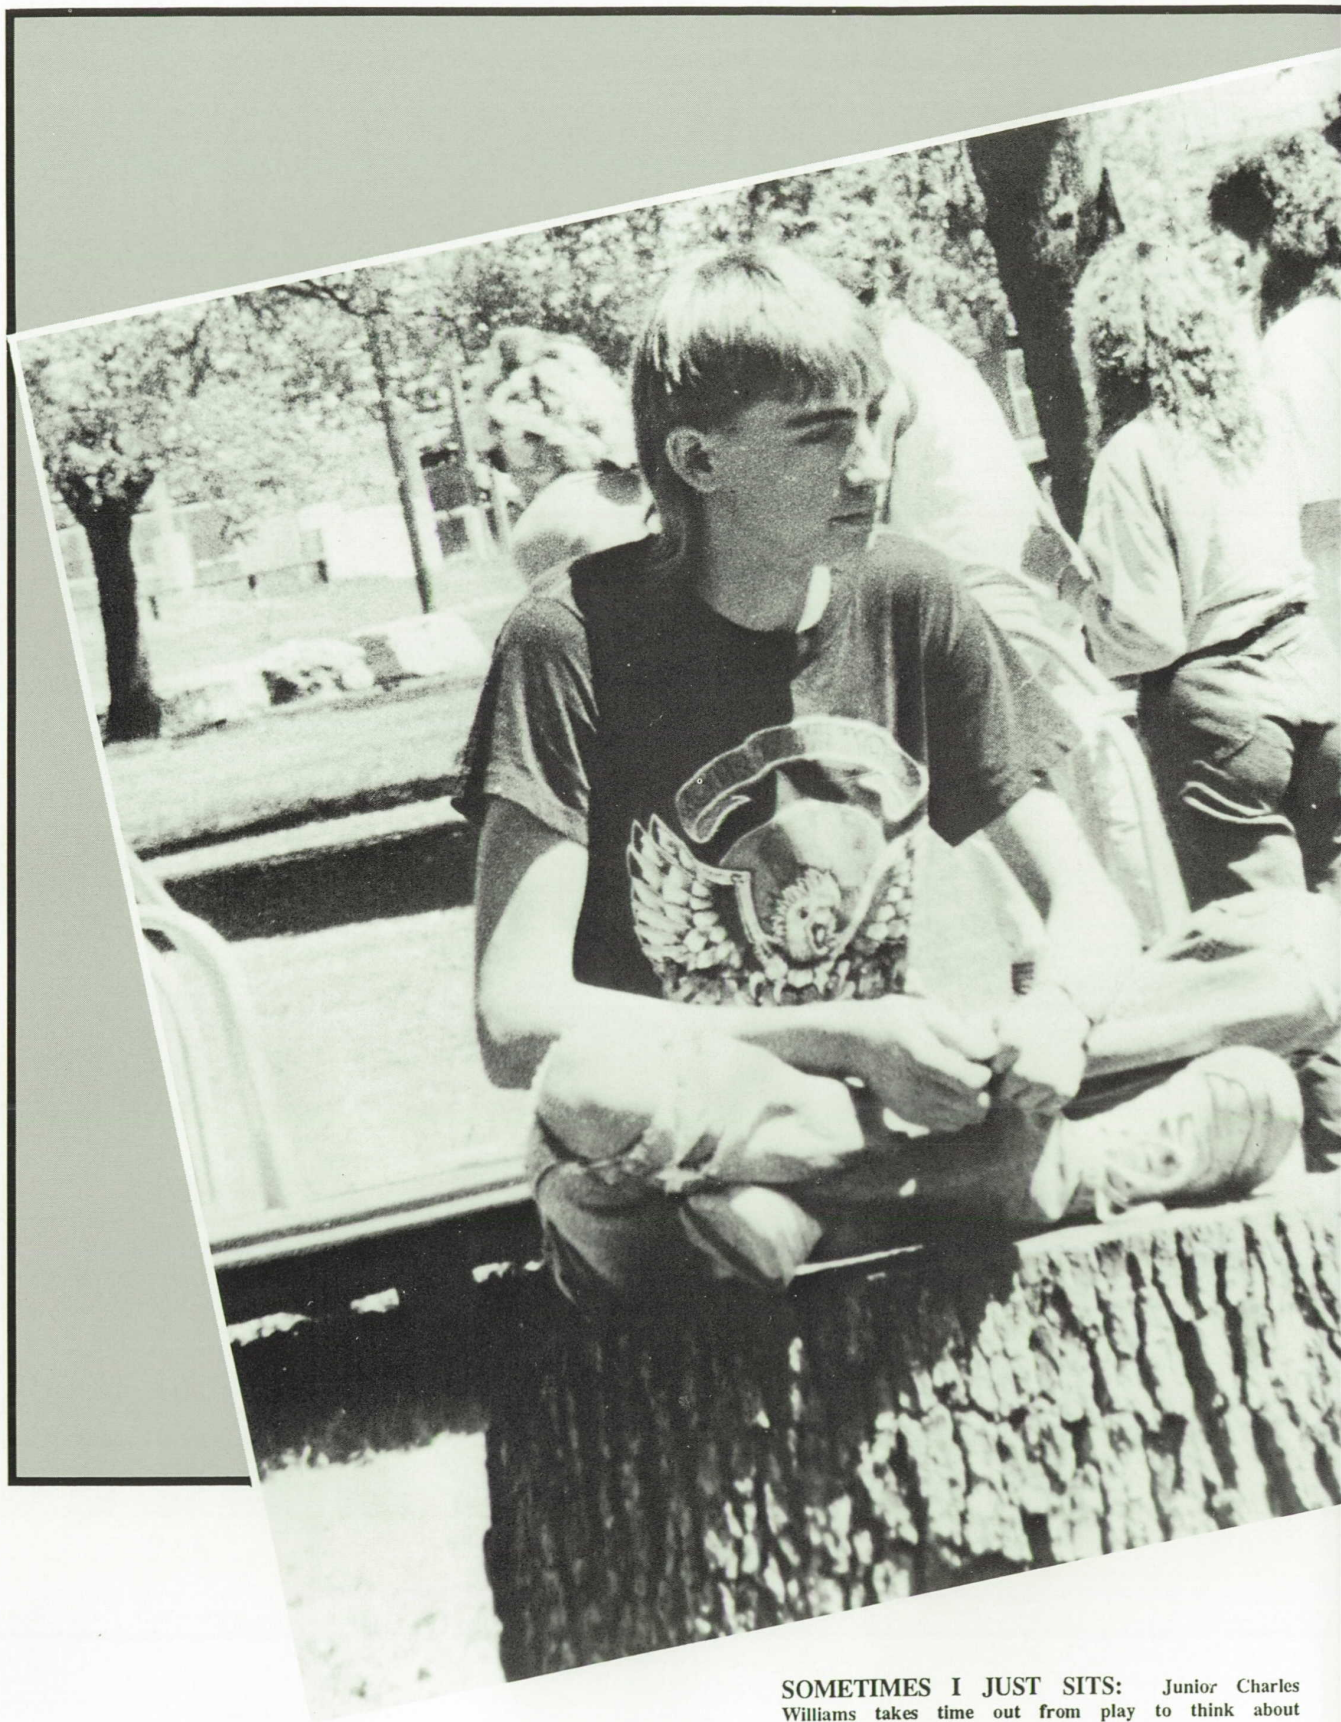

"I went to North Carolina," said senior Betsy Stewart. "They have trees in North Carolina, big trees."

Some students had to stay home, but they made the best of the situation.

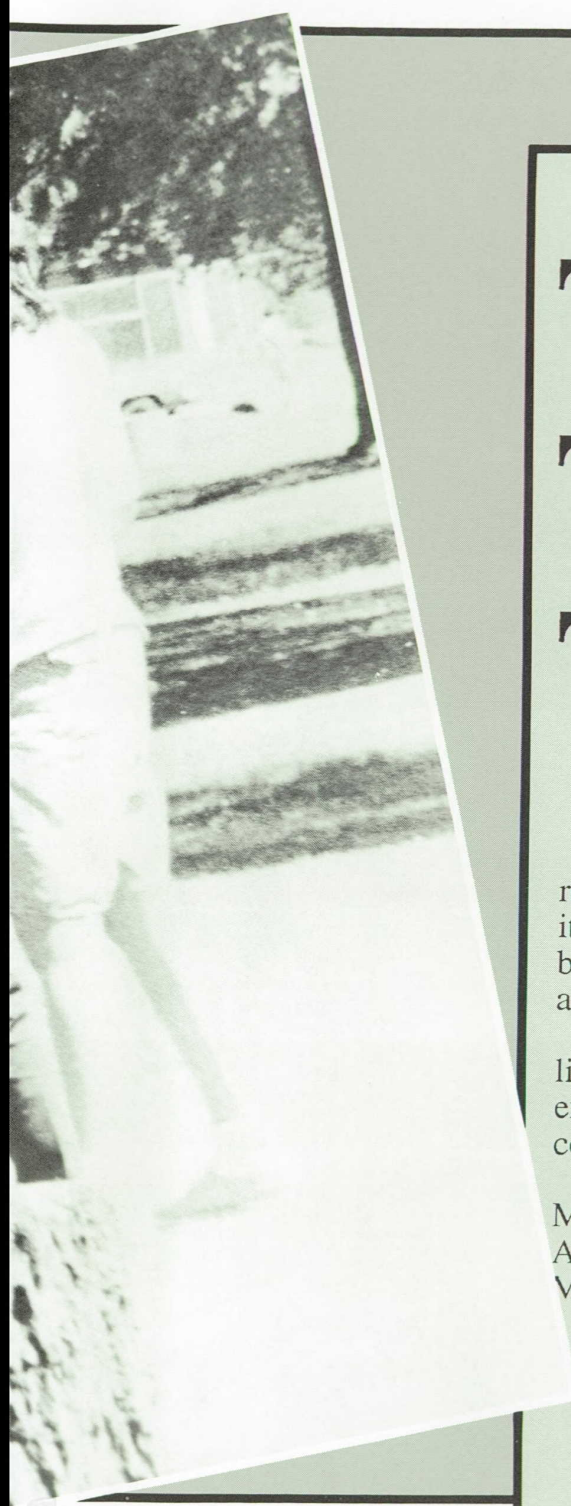

"I tried to lay out but it rained," junior Dawn Parizek said. "I went to the movies and I went to Trudy's and I rode a horse for the first time."

"It must have been fun, I have a lot of smiley faces on my calendar," said junior Anita Nelson.

SOMETIMES I JUST SITS: Junior Charles Williams takes time out from play to think about his afternoon classes during lunch at the park.

The Good, The Bad, The Brainy

While student activities alleviated the daily routine, the real essence of the school continued to be its academic programs. The strong academic base brought sweepstakes honors in district literary UIL and resulted in three Merit Scholarship winners.

Many of the students not involved in UIL literary brought home awards for academic excellence in other areas such as photography, computer science, and vocational departments.

In September, 1526 students enrolled, but by May that number had dropped to 1415. Approximately 317 seniors graduated at Eagle field May 30, a drop of 60 from the previous year.

Teachers show spirit

If there was one thing students could count on every Friday morning it was seeing Mrs. Tally McAferty cheering at the pep rallies. "I think spirit should be done all year long, not just in the fall," said Mrs. McAferty. "I think there's more to school than just study. Teachers should set an example. It's not just for sports, but for sports, clubs and classes. It should be a part of everything."

Some teachers liked to put decorations on their doors th show students how much they supported them.

"I kept clippings from the paper during football and basketball season and put them on my door," said volleyball coach Sue Davidson. "I also put up F.F.A. and other clubs. Spirit builds tradition."

Testing...

This is a test. There are no words a student hates hearing more than these four little words, but, as they are a necessary part of education, all students must toughen up and study.

How do students study? Many students gave the same reply, "I don't."

Others took a more serious approach, such as sophomore Chris Norden who said, "I lock myself in my room so I can't be disturbed, turn on the radio, and get to work."

"Some people remember everything, but I have to study in order to make good grades," said freshman Constance Harry.

"My mom forces me to," said Chris. "In eighth grade, I failed English with a 65. Now my mom makes sure I'm working."

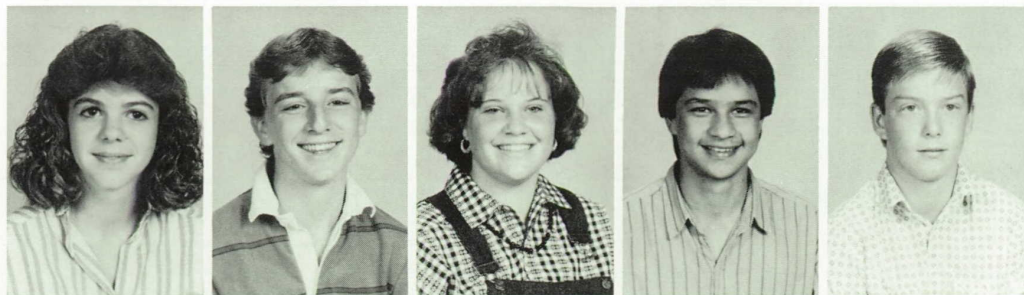

Other students gave a variety of answers, such as "so I don't fail," from senior Michelle Williams, who studies by "sitting in front of the T.V. and glancing at the papers occasionally."

Most students said they studied only for the occasional test, but Laura Kleen, a National Merit Scholarship Finalist, said she studied "for every test."

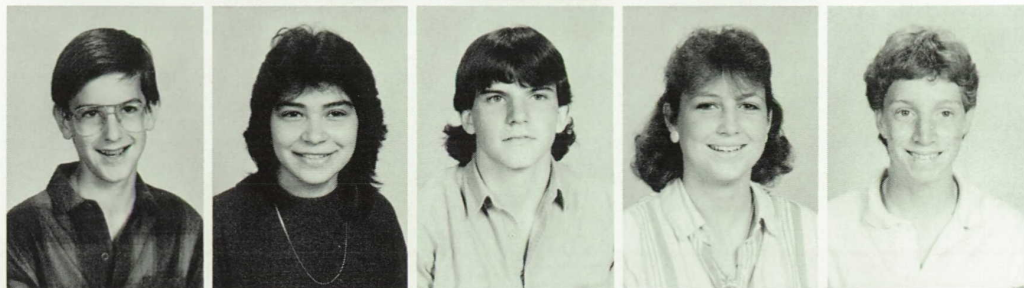

CRAM SESSION: Sophomore Bill Taylor studies for a test in the Commons during lunch.

Many students took advantage of the longer lunch hour to study and visit with friends.

Freshmen find algebra challenging

"Solve for X using the slope intercept formula given slope and Y."

Instructions like these were seen by freshmen who took Algebra I as their first high school math course. Most agreed it was usually difficult.

"It's one of my harder classes," said Eric Klingemann.

Like most math courses, Algebra I could be tedious and exacting, but some freshmen found parts of the challenge enjoyable.

"I like the statement problems and graphing," said Greg Zavala.

Algebra I was just a beginning for many freshmen. Some planned to take four or five math courses in high school.

"I'll probably take three, maybe four years of math," said Eric, "I may take calculus my senior year."

Long range plans also had a part in determining what math courses freshmen planned to take, and Algebra I was a good start.

"I'll need it a lot in college," said Jason Geigley, "I want to be a dentist and math will be real important."

UNDIVIDED ATTENTION: Freshman Lori Johnson listens intently to the discussion in class.

From Christopher Columbus to Benedict Arnold. From the Dark Ages to the Renaissance. World History covered the world.

A popular social studies course among underclassmen, World History told the way it was "History is hard because you have to memorize a lot of things," said freshman Delane Wright.

Many agreed that the class was challenging but still interesting and fun.

"The maps are fun," said freshman Angela Wrinkler. "I like to color, and we get grades for coloring pictures."

Students tried to find a time in history that they could relate to, so they could understand things better.

"I like the 1900's because it was easy to understand," said freshman Jennifer Stewart.

COMPUTER WHIZ: Despite his blindness, freshman Michael Vrabel learned to negotiate the halls and the crowds, and used computers, Braille typewriters, and tape recorders to take notes in his classes.

Start your engines

To many it was the most important class offered at school. But it wasn't taken during the regular school day, and no credit was offered for it. This class was a first step toward freedom.

The class was, of course, drivers' education. The complete course in drivers' ed. was made up of two parts, a classroom phase and a driving phase. It was the second part in which many students had interesting experiences.

"Somebody almost ran into a pole. We screamed," said junior Denise Klabonski. "I saw my life pass before me. I thought we were going to die. It was awful."

Many driving experiences were a result of certain types of students.

"We had a girl who never drove before and a guy who thought he knew everything," junior Keith Wilson said.

Inexperienced drivers had a tendency to make mistakes while driving, when safety is so important.

"A friend of mine was driving, and he tried to turn on his blinker and his windshield wipers came on," sophomore John Bean said.

Driving instructors were also a factor in the course's proceedings.

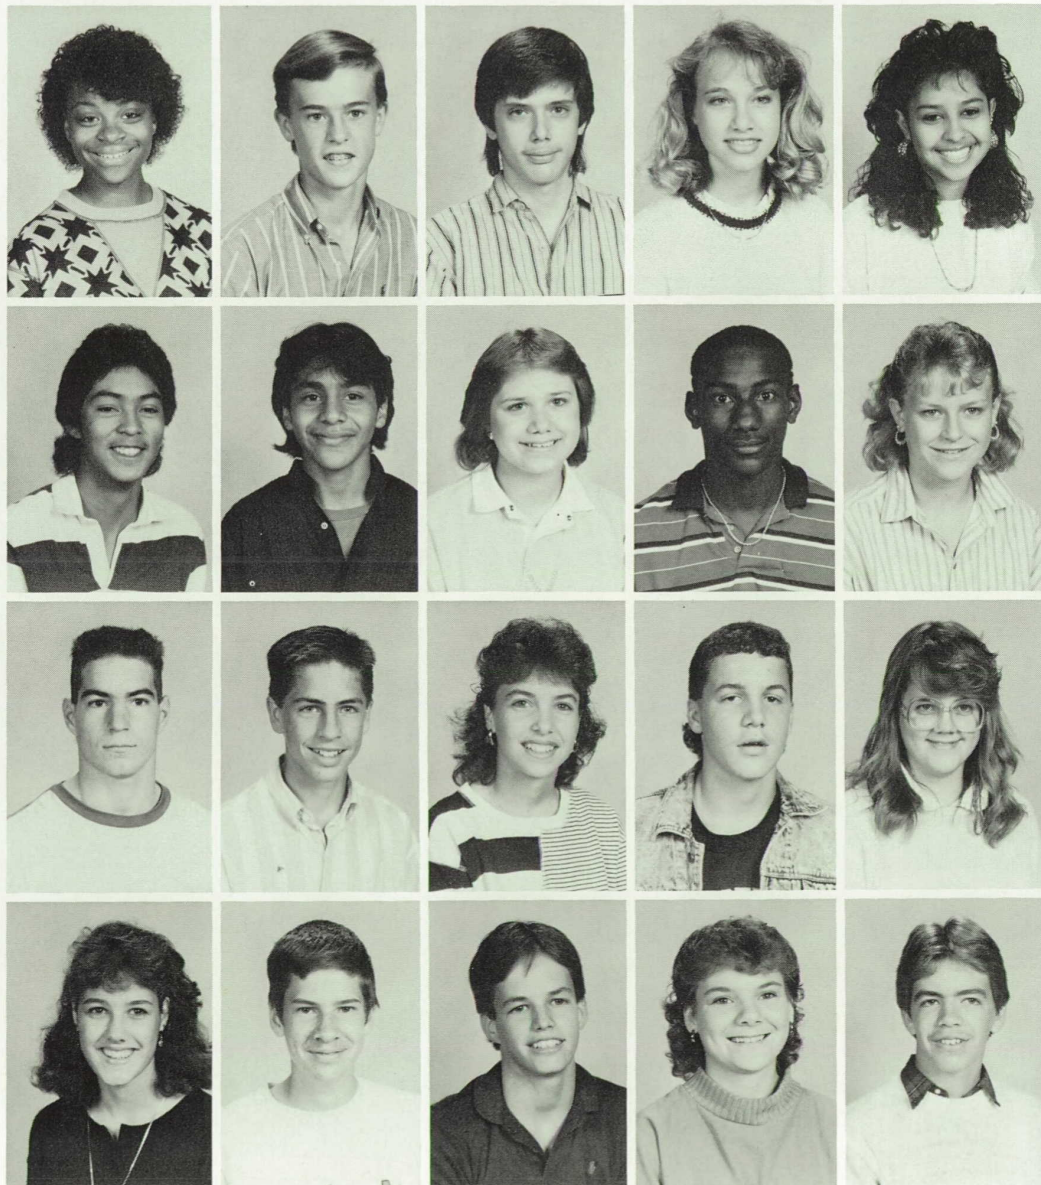

"Never get behind the wheel with Mr. Hughes," Keith said. "Mr. Hughes would tell us to accelerate until he said to stop. Steven Kendrick hit the curb because Mr. Hughes said 'whoa,' not 'stop'."

Freshmen choose typing elective

"He has a sled load of leeks for her fall bake sale."

"Lou owns an inn in the town; she won it on a show."

"Gig went to Rio on a golf tour with Gene Soto."

These sentences were used to improve the typing skills of many students who took a typing class.

"Typing has been and will be a useful skill," said sophomore Leeann Bednar. "I am glad to have it."

Typing students learned a great deal of information and techniques for producing better looking papers.

"You're able to learn how to type reports, research papers, and stuff," said freshman Cheree Robertson.

Typing was cited as a change of pace from other classes by some students.

"It's easier than other classes because you don't have homework and there's not much stress on you to take it," said Cheree.

"It's a little easier than other classes because it doesn't involve writing," said freshman Jennifer Riley.

Scientific fact: 'fish' amazed

Scientific fact: Hairspray is flammable. And a physical science student, who wished to remain anonymous, found that fact out the hard way while working with a bunsen burner in a class experiment. Scientific fact II: Burnt hairspray stinks.

Although everyday wasn't exciting in Physical Science, many freshmen enjoyed the course's challenge and variety.

"It's hard to understand chemical equations," said Jennifer Hood. "But once you learn how to do them, you should be O.K."

Experiments and laboratory work, or labs, were definitely the most popular aspect of the class.

"I like doing the experiments to see if it really happens or not," said Greg Nemec.

Most liked the freedom and change of pace of the physical science lab work.

Freshman English sparks imaginations

A little girl dressed as a ham and her brother walked home in the darkness of the night, taking a shortcut through the woods when a man attacked them. The little girl was knocked down and could hardly see through her costume as they were rescued by another unknown man.

Although this event did not happen in Georgetown, it came alive in the minds of freshman English I students through To Kill a Mockingbird.

"I liked To Kill a Mockingbird because it was about slavery and how things were back then," said Trey Rachui.

Various reasons were given for liking literature.

"I liked To Kill a Mockingbird because the kids were always getting into trouble," said Price Alexander.

Not all reading assignments were popular with the students.

"We read I Heard the Owl Call My Name," said Brian Holley. "I didn't like it because it was a different kind of writing."

Some students had unique reading techniques and experiences.

"We read When the Legends Die," said Sha Starnes. "I'm part Indian, so I guess I can relate to it. In July, we go to Oklahoma. All my relatives do the dances and sing the songs the Indians did at the Pow-Wow."

Still other students would have been happy if the number of assignments had been fewer.

"I don't like reading that much," said Frank Litterst. "We read The Sword in the Stone. It was a little better than Romeo and Juliet."

DECK THE HALLS: Freshman Kami White and sophomore Michael Rose help paint the mural in the Commons for Christmas. They were both students from Coach Larry Moorhead's art class. Coach Moorhead's classes also painted banners to hang in the Commons area to help celebrate Christmas. A competition was held between the art classes to see which could outdo the others. Some of the banners included snow scenes, Christmas trees, and toys. A Nativity scene won the honor for the best drawing. "It was a good way to get in the Christmas spirit," said senior Katy Schulze. All about the birds and bees

Imagine 17,000 six legged creatures invading your room. That wasn't so difficult for the five biology teachers, who assigned each of their students the task of collecting at least 50 insect for 25 percent of their second six week' grades.

For the students who had to gather the bugs, collecting was sometimes hazardous. Climbing a tree trying to catch a bee, sophomore Leeann Bednar was stung four times.

"The bug collecting was fun, but getting stung wasn't," Leanne said.

Sophomore Greg Burnette fell flat on his face while trying to catch a butterfly, and Calley Poarch tripped over his canoe while trying to catch a dragonfly on his pond.

"I'm just glad to get it over with," said sophomore Mark Davies.

Algebra II solves problems

Did you know the letter "a" can stand for 43,125 people, 13 cookies, or even one million dollars? In Algebra II, letters represent any number when solving an equation. This fact proved confusing to many students.

"Most of the equations have five steps to them before you even get to plot any points," freshman Mike Cardwell said. "I'll take calculus my senior year. I want to be an astronaut or a test pilot. A lot of equations have to do with the stability of the plane."

However, not everyone found Algebra II confusing or difficult.

"You always expect Algebra II to be so boring, but not in Mrs. McAferty's class," sophomore Shannon Miller said. "She's really funny and super goofy. She always cracks little jokes here and there but yet she lets us have fun and goof around some too. It's not a blow off class, but I feel she teaches good. I like her attitude toward kids."

"I'll probably stop taking math at geometry," said sophomore Stacey Sowers. "I only need four years and I doubled up this year."

HOW DO YOU FIGURE: Tally McAferty's class said she expected algebra to be boring but Mrs. McAferty made it interesting. Shannon Miller, a student in Mrs.

DESIGNING STUDENTS:

Donna Przygoda for a lesson in

You oughta be in pictures

A picture is worth a thousand words, and contrary to popular belief, both pictures and words were parts of the curriculum in photojournalism.

Photojournalism, or PJ, taught by Mrs. Donna Przygoda, provided an interesting subject and a change of pace.

An interest in photography drew students to the course. "I like to take pictures," both senior Matt Thomas and sophomore Kathy Johnson said.

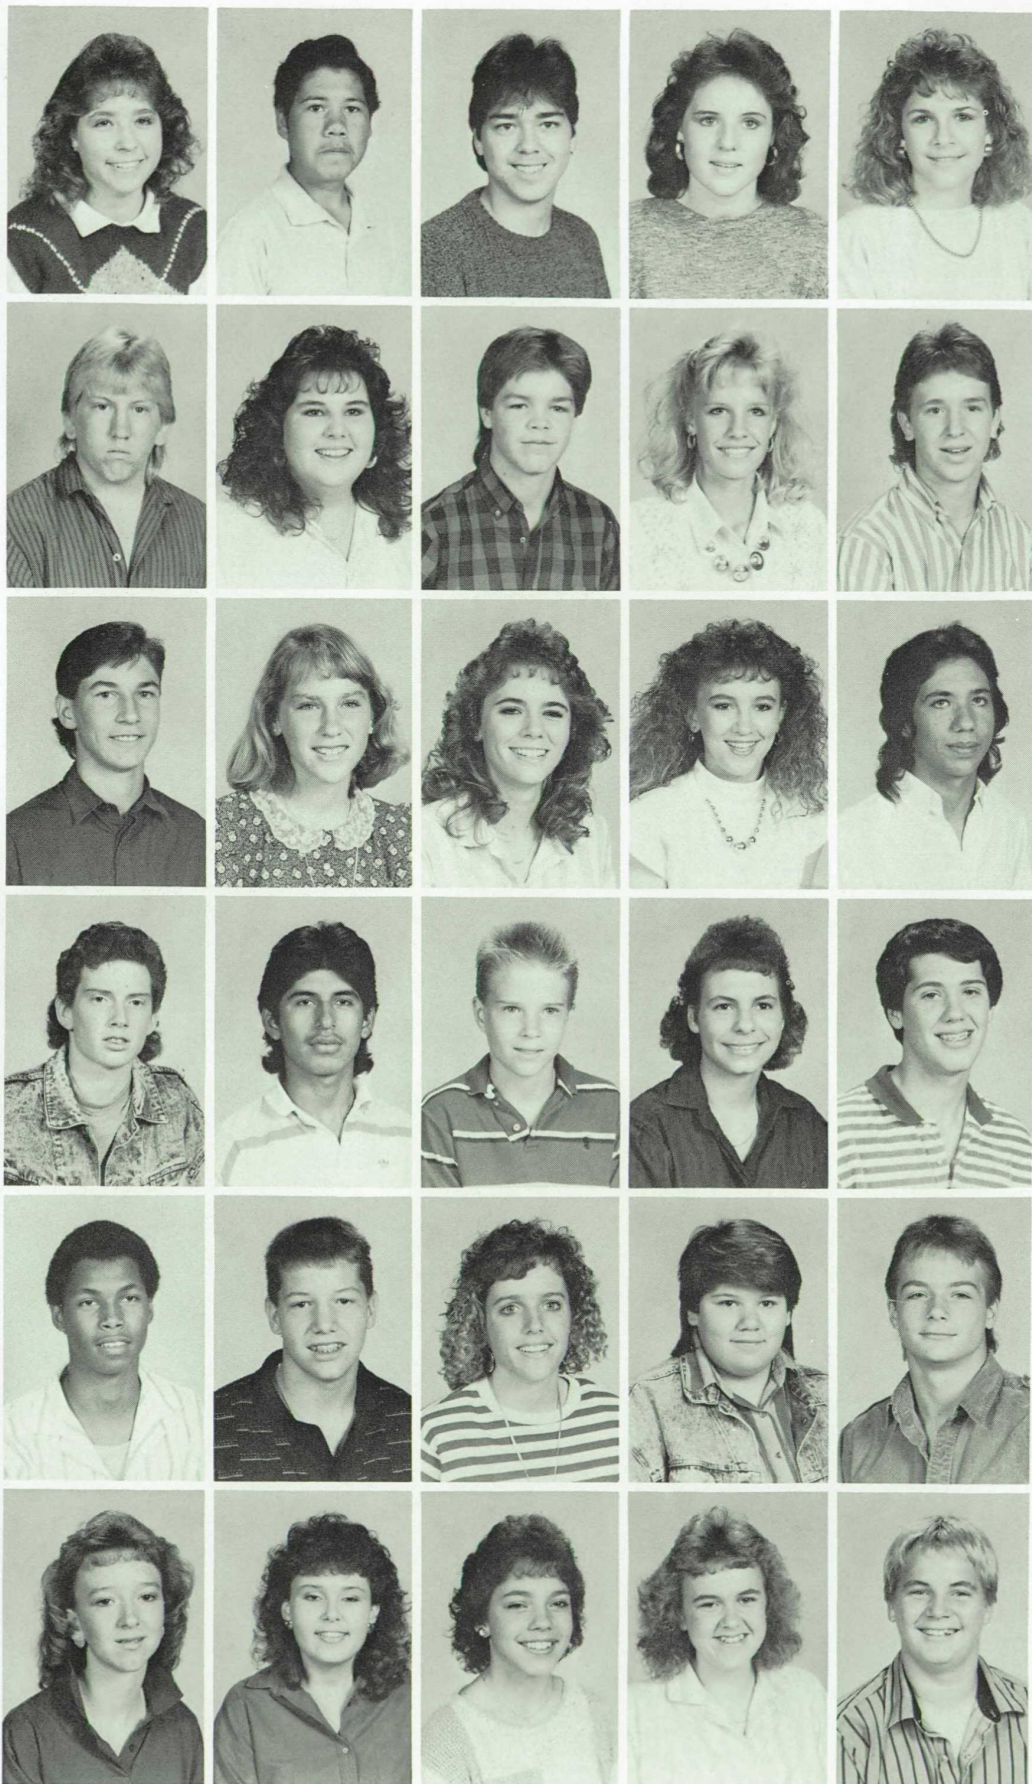

Photojournalism students not only learned how to use their cameras, they also learned how to develop film, how to make pictures, or prints, and how to use advanced techniques of picture taking.

"Seeing the prints come out is cool," Kathy said, "Because like, you accomplished it, you know?"

Pictures were not the same without good subjects. People were the favorite targets, and the photographers soon found out that they not only had to take the pictures but also write about them.

"I wasn't too sure about the journalism aspect of the class," senior Scott Dean said, "But after I thought about it, it seemed to be almost as interesting as the photography."

Many PJ students were interested in careers in photography, but most were in it just for fun.

Where are the Alps?

What is an isthmus?

Why isn't Florida connected to Europe anymore?

How do the people of Southeast Asia live?

The answer to these questions and a whole lot more could be learned in geography class.

"We lecture a lot about recent stuff," freshman Jason Geigley said. "I learn a lot about capitals and countries."

A big part of the class is learning about foreign cultures, the ways of life in other countries.

"I would like to visit the eastern part of Asia," said freshman Jenny Bohanan. "It would be neat to see how they lived and to see their cultures."

Geography turned many students on to far away places.

"I'd like to see France. I want to go to Paris," freshman Brian Mersiovsky said. "I want to see the Eiffel Tower."

Others wanted to stay right where they were.

"Mr. Moore has shown me that we are so fortunate to live in this country," said freshman Bryan Burkhalter.

Juniors turn on to chemistry

The student turns the Bunsen burner on. The flame blazes to the bottom of the crucible. The water heats and begins to boil over...that starts a fire...which leads to an explosion...which leads to an F.

Many students experienced problems like these in their chemistry classes.

"I almost burned my hands off," junior Pat Hanks said. "I turned up the Bunsen burner real high and forgot it was on. I almost singed my hand off."

Math seemed to be the hardest part of the class for some students.

"Chemistry is alright except for the math, but I like doing the labs," junior Barbara Waznik said.

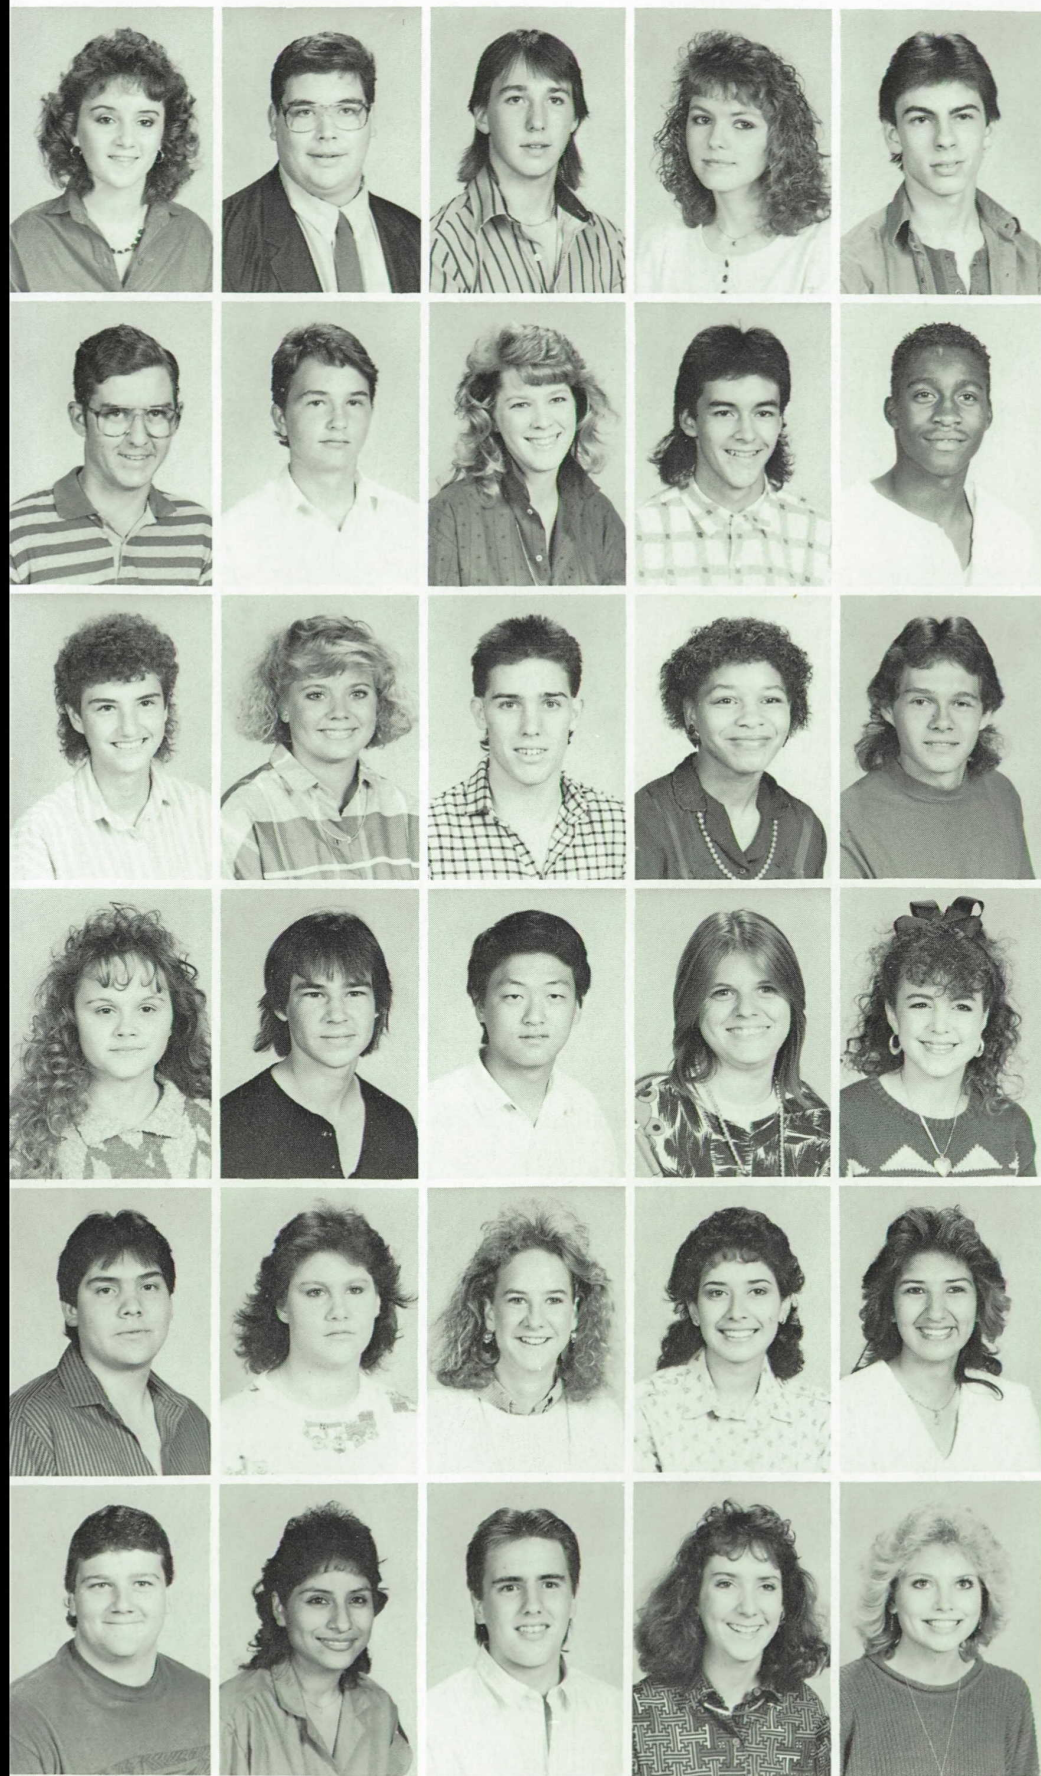

Some classes made food or candy at Christmas. "My favorite part was when we made candy canes at Christmastime," junior Melissa Petterson said.

Even though chemistry wasn't everyone's easiest class, it wasn't repititious or like other classes.

"Although chemistry is a lot of hard work, it can also be a lot of fun," junior Heather Gill said.

Just the plane facts

It's defined as "the branch of mathematics dealing with the properties, measurements, and relationships of points, lines, planes, and solids" by the dictionary. However, students defined it as "no picnic."

"I don't like constructions because you have to remember where to put the compass and what line goes where," junior Melinda Smith said.

Even though it was difficult for some, students took the class to get the credit.

"It's hard. The tests are harder. I need the credit. I'd like to take as much math as I can," sophomore Jeff Walters said.

Many students found uses for geometry in other classes and in their career goals.

"I want to be an oceanographic engineer so that needs a lot of math," sophomore Debbie Bloom said, "I'll take trigonometry and analysis my junior year and calculus my senior year."

The class requirements and contents often gave students trouble.

Not everyone found the class hard. To some, it was more of a challenge.

"Believe it or not I really enjoy the proofs. Although I usually end up with a headache after finishing one, I like trying to find more than one way to solve them," sophomore Melanie Bryce said.

Journal Entry #78: "Nothing really happened today."

Many students felt the need to write this or something similar in their journals, but they never could. Instead they wrote: "Today in English we finished The Great Gatsby, did a grammar assignment, and got a topic to write on in our journals."

Grammar, novels, and research papers were a n important part of English III.

"There is more open discussion," said junior Daniel Burgeson. "I liked

The Scarlet Letter. It was hard to understand , but I learned a lot from it. I'll probably take Academic English next year."

"The grammar is the hardest part of the course," said junior Nathan Webb. "The literature is better. We read The Great Gatsby. I liked it. It showed how the 20's were."

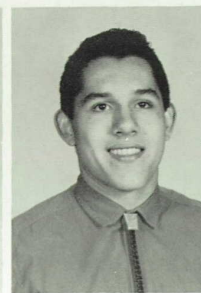

Even though the course was challenging, students were still able to learn something from it.

"This class makes you think," said junior John Denney. "There's more of an intelligent atmosphere. The Great Gatsby was a good book. It was very intriguing, very well written."

HISTORY BUFF: Junior Dean Bowers crams at the last minute for a history test. Dean won the American History award given at the end of the year for the student with the highest grade point average in the class.

History dispels popular myths

One reason our founding fathers may have started the American Revolution was to make a little money.

Truths like this about America's past, opposed to the popular beliefs, were uncovered in United States history classes.

"I liked World War II. It was the goriest, but it's the best example of the real world," junior Kevin Shannon said. "It showed true American ingenuity."

Many students had favorite times from the United States' past.

"I like the Depression time. It was cool to learn about," junior Dario

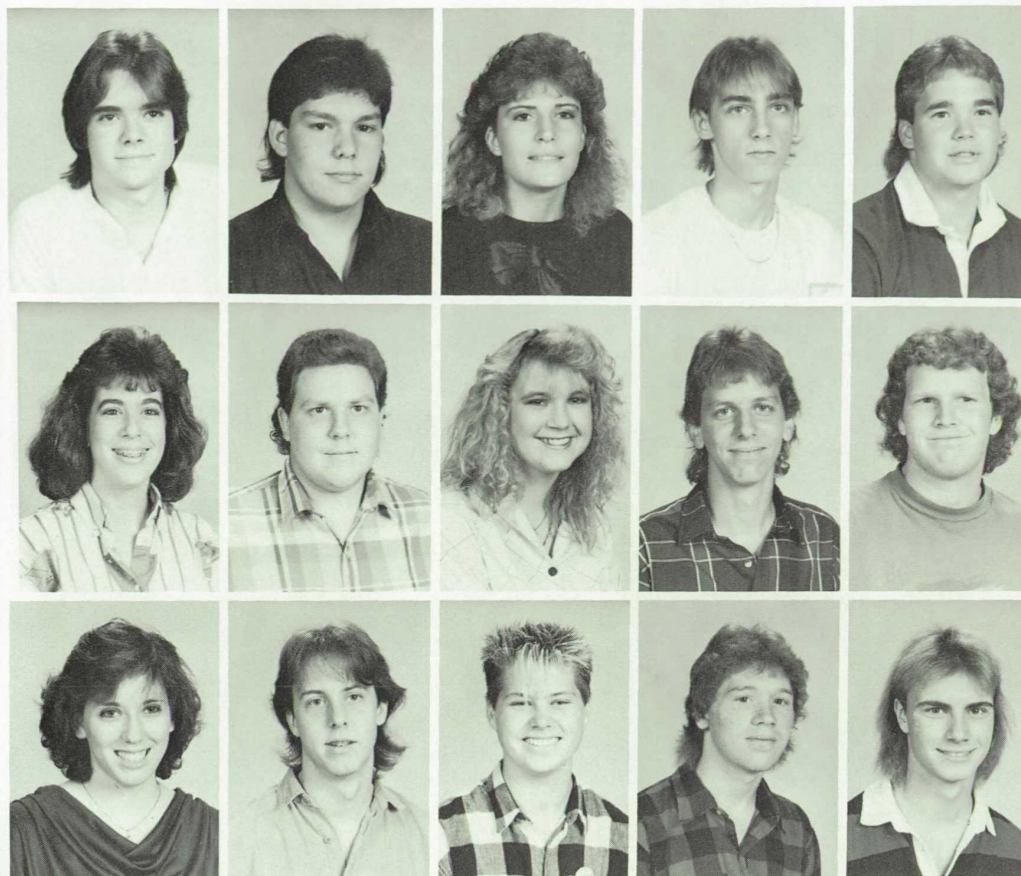

Valdez said. "We didn't get to experience it, but we're learning what happened in the past."

The course opened doors for some students into American history.

"I think it's interesting because people talked about things that happened in the past," junior Bobby Thornton said, "and now I know what they're talking about."

United States history was also a source of immeasurable knowledge.

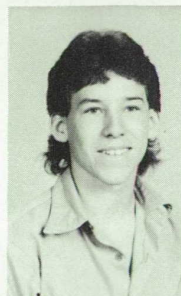

"I never knew who the presidents were," junior Denise Mendez said, "I found out there's a whole lot of them. I thought Carter was the first."

EVERYONE HAS HER UPS AND DOWNS: Sophomores Michelle Crawford and Marsha Coston try out new playground equipment in San Gabriel Park. The park was a popular stomping ground for many students. Lunchtime was the perfect opportunity to meet with friends and relax after a morning of classes. "Lunch in the park is a nice change from the crowded restaurants. I usually grab a burger from Hardee's and take it to the park. The atmosphere is better," said junior Lee Davenport. "You can take your time," said junior Rhonda Doerfler. Students frequently visited the park after school and on weekends. "I enjoy going there after school because it's peaceful," said junior Melinda Smith. "It's a cool place to get away," said senior Lori White. Other students had completely different opinions about the park. "I think the speed limit should be more than 20," said junior Tabitha Langford.

Last But Not Least

Last but not least, the clubs section told who was involved, the index told where everyone was, and the ads helped pay for it all. To make the three sections more interesting the AERIE staff combined them into one.

The AERIE staff would like to thank the advertisers for supporting the production of this book. Each year expenses have increased, and without the funds collected from our advertisers, we could not have brought a book this size to our readers.

The clubs expanded school work with extra curricular activities, such as fund raisers and service projects. Many students took an active role in club activities. Those activities which included schoolwide functions are covered elsewhere in the book.

The index was compiled for our readers' convenience, and combined with the other sections for readability.

Some senior surveys may also be found in this section. The overwhelming response by seniors necessitated continuing them from the senior section.

SPANISH CLUB

Students in Spanish classes had an opportunity to join the Spanish Club.

The main goal of the club was to produce a successful Miss Ano Nuevo Pageant, held annually by the club. The pageant, held February 13 at the Williams Middle School, featured boys who dressed up as girls and performed in front of an audience. Categories of performance included evening gown, swimsuit competition, and talent. Paul Christie also known as "Chi Chi Consuelo," won the crown. Paul described his winning by saying, "I didn't know if I should be proud or embarrassed."

The money made at the pageant was used toward a fund to provide a scholarship to a senior Spanish Club member.

Latin

Latin Club was a club designed to give the opportunity for second year Latin students to meet first year Latin students, and further their interest in Latin.

Money was raised through the sale of candy grams at Christmas. The money was used to give $50 scholarships to two Latin II students. This years recipients were Mike Buck and Shelly Bland.

In April, the club held their banquet at Cheuys. At the banquet, humorous awards were given to each member.

Officers for the club were President Kim Reiersen, Secretary Kim Olson, Treasurer Nick Johnson, and Leader of the Games Catherine Parnell.

Aerie

Many successes came to the Aerie staff as a result of the 1987 yearbook, but the staff continued to strive for excellence.

Members of the staff attended summer camp at Baylor University. With the aid of the Photojournalism classes, the staff sold ads, took pictures, wrote copy, and designed this year's book.

The 1987 yearbook received an Award of Distinguished Merit from ILPC, and three individual state awards.

Talon Wings

The presses rolled six times for the school newspaper The Talon this year, and for the first time, it received an Award of Distinguished Merit, the highest award given by the Interscholastic League Press Conference.

"We were so excited to get such a high rating since we were competing against so many schools from all over Texas," Co-Editor Malissa Endsley said.

The victory was especially sweet because of publication problems that plagued The Talon and the literary publication Wings.

"The Williamson County Sun used to typeset all our copy, but they switched computer systems in the middle of our fourth issue," Co-Editor Beth Christian said.

Staff members and advisor Pat Easterling then saw the purchase of a computer for the journalism department as the only solution.

The yearbook Aerie offered to pay half the cost, so then the two publications shared the new computer, as well as the one the Aerie already leased.

Wings, featuring student poems, short stories, and artwork, appeared four times as an insert in The Talon.

FBLA

Being a member of Future Business Leaders of America meant more than paying dues and attending meetings.

FBLA sold student directories for $2 which listed students' names and telephone numbers. The club sponsored a Fajita Supper at the Community Center to donate funds for the missing stones of the Veterans' Memorial. A "free enterprise" day was held for grades K-3.

The club competed in district contests in Computer Composition, Business Law, Business Math, Speech, and many others. Mrs. Pam Dishberger sponsored the club.

FHA

Future Homemakers of America had 30 members. Their purpose was to learn about building good, strong homes for the future.

Fund raisers included the Easter raffle, and FHA members participated in the adopt a highway project. They went to San Antonio for an area convention, had a leadership workshop conducted by state officers and attended a self image workshop.

Adviser Mrs. Ann Tounge said "They learned to set goals and think for themselves."

FHA President Diane Benner said "It was a good experience to be president of an organization and I got to meet a lot of different people plus it was fun."

Learning about teaching and educational procedures was the major concern of the elementary aides.

The students visited elementary classes three times a week to teach lessons, make bulletin boards and to help grade papers for elementary teachers.

Most of the elementary aides wanted to be teachers themselves.

"I plan to be a teacher," said senior Diane Benner. "It was a great learning experience for me. I'm really excited about the future."

DECA: Kim McShane, Melinda Bostick, Cindy Raum, Dana Roberts, Jason Iverson, Gilbert Estrada, and Leslie Collings.

DECA

Distributive Education Clubs of America introduced students to the basic concepts and skills needed for careers in the field of marketing. Students developed an understanding of the functions of the marketing process and basic skills in human relations, business policies, management principles, communications, free enterprise, computer applications, inventory control, merchandising, selling and entrepreneurship. Members of DECA attended school for half the day and worked the remainder of the day at an approved training station.

HECE

HECE was a club for students enrolled in Food Production Management and Services I, which was a course designed to prepare students for employment in the food service industry. Emphasis was placed on quality of cooking, personal grooming and hygiene, and sanitary cooking methods.

Food services II was a course designed to prepare students for employment in the food service industry with emphasis on dessert preparation, cake decorating, and serving.

School Board

How to keep quality education despite declining funds and enrollment were two of the major problems facing the school board.

The board dealt with the transition of power from veteran Superintendent Jack Frost to Dr. Jim Gunn.

In May, voters selected two new members to fill vacancies created when board members Tommy Foust and Bob Jenkins relinquished their seats.

SPEECH

The Speech Club was a club designed for those students interested in Extemporaneous Speaking, Debate, and Poetry.

Members of the club participated in numerous tournaments throughout the year. Tournaments at Westlake, Plano, and Mc Arthur High Schools, determined who would qualify for the National Forensic League competition.

The squad took first place at District, defeating squads from Westwood and Westlake, and took firsts in Extemporaneous Speaking, Debate, and Poetry.

SPECTRUM

Spectrum, the drama club, was open to any student who had an interest in drama related activities.

Members of the club helped with the UIL one act play, Bus Stop, and some of the members were in the cast.

Drama club member Laura Hayes was named to the district all-star cast.

Mrs. Helen Smith sponsored the club.

VICA

Welding, Mechanics, provide OJT

The Welding Chapter 862 of the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America, VICA, was a club with job training for those wishing to pursue a career in welding.

The main goals reached in VICA included blueprint reading, cutting and welding with oxyfuel, shielded metal arc welding, gas tungsten arc, the gas metal arc welding process, entrepreneurship, safety and career opportunities.

This year's welding classes were two-hour courses under the supervision of Mr. Larry Connelly. Welding-VICA officers were: President, Russell Skinner, Vice-President, Kurk Anderson; Secretary, Lance Weir; Treasurer, Corey Jackson; Reporter, L.J. Hauser; Parliamentarian, Joey Skero; and Advisor, Shane Stark.

As a member of VICA, students in Auto Mechanics were also given an opportunity to learn to how to repair a car.

The main goals of this course included learning to use hand and power tools, with much stress placed on the safety in repairing an automobile. The members had a chance to work on their own cars as well as other cars. The VICA Auto Mechanics portion was sponsored by Mr. Jesse Lozano.

National Honor Society members must have demonstrated scholarship, leadership, character, and service to be inducted.

Some service projects the NHS participated in this year included wrapping presents for Project Share, cleaning up litter in the Adopt-a-Highway program, working at the Special Olympics, and timing at speech tournaments.

Fundraisers were held to generate money for scholarships and the annual banquet. Raffle tickets were sold for the Cars concert and for a dinner for two at the Foothills restaurant.

This year the Fellowship of Christian Athletes was changed to Fellowship of Christian Students to allow those students who were not athletes to become members.

Activities included a paper drive, a cookout, and volleyball games. Meetings were highlighted by speakers from the University of Texas and Baylor University.

The club's purpose was to promote Christianity in association with athletics and the members' daily lives. The club discussed how to deal with peer pressure among students and how to deal with stressful situations in a Christian way.

FRENCH CLUB

The French Club, better known as "Le Club Francais" to it's members, was involved in many activities this year.

At Homecoming, the club raffled a dinner for two at Chez Fred, a popular French restaurant. Members sold refreshments at the Miss Ano Nuevo pageant to raise money.

Upper classmen who had already completed French II donated their time to help serve as tutors to French I students, when they needed help.

The French Club was sponsored by Mrs. Jan Stanford.

VOCT

CVAE General Construction was a course designed to prepare students for entry level proficiency in the construction field. Instruction in safety, care for and use of tools, and actual "hands on" experience in carpentry, brick masonry, concrete finishing, plumbing, and painting were stressed. Activities included, district leadership competition, student projects, and state leadership competition in May.

VOCT teacher Robert Kleen said, "All VOCT was organized to teach leadership and entrepreneurship to give students a chance to compete with their student projects built in the shop."

Q: Do you think the U.S. government should send aid to the Contras in Nicaragua?

Malissa Endsley: Communism appeals to Central American countries because they are poor. So we should try to help them develop economically.

Chris Smith: Yes. But it should have been better supervised by the U.S. There was too much that was misused and stolen.

OEA

All office education students belonged to the local, state and national Office Education Association (OEA). They participate in the area and state contests through (OEA).

Office Education Cooperative Training was a program where students gained actual work experience through employment at area banks, county offices, insurance offices, real estate companies, and many other business offices in the community.

In class, special emphasis was placed on keyboarding, records management, proofreading, and human relations.

"Congratulations"
We think you're terrific.
Get em "Sike."

Future Farmers of America was an organization many students joined by enrolling in Vocational Agriculture. Any student who took Ag. 1-4 was able to be a member.

The club met once a month to discuss anything from fund-raisers to Spring banquets.

Being a member of FFA gave students opportunities such as showing and producing livestock, judging livestock, and attending district and state conventions, among many other things.
FFA promoted leadership, friendship, and learning things by doing them.

SADD

SADD members sold baked goods, held a car wash, bake sales, put cards in corsage and boutonniere boxes at prom, and more to get their message to students: don't drink and drive.

SADD promoted the signing of a "Contract of Life." This agreement between parents and son or daughter had the student promise to call at any time, from any place when they had been drinking so the parent could pick them up.

SADD members also promoted the chemical free party after graduation, and hoped to sponsor scholarships for senior members.

Q: Do you feel confident in your knowledge about AIDS and who is at risk?

Dawn Parizek: Yes. I learned in Biology I what it does to your system and how you get it. I plan to do everything I can to avoid it.

Sherry Conner: I feel the information I have learned about AIDS is reliable. People who are homosexuals or are promiscuous have the greatest chances in my opinion of contracting AIDS.

Student Council

Concession stands. Homecoming. School dances. Elections. Coronation. These are just some of the responsibilities of the Student Council.

"I've really enjoyed being on the Student Council," said 1st Vice-President Bianca Rodriguez. "It was a lot of hard work, though. We had so much to do."

Besides organizing such events as school dances and the Mr. and Miss GHS Coronation, the members of Student Council also put messages on the marquee, decorated bulletin boards, and conducted elections.

"We were so busy this year," said President Beth Christian. "We tried to do things differently to add more variety to school events and to help build school spirit."

COMMAND: Please enter a 22 variable statement that responds to the following adjectives: active, exciting, unusual, fun, and new. RESPONSE: Georgetown Bowling Lanes. ERROR- The correct response, of course, is the Science and Computer Club.

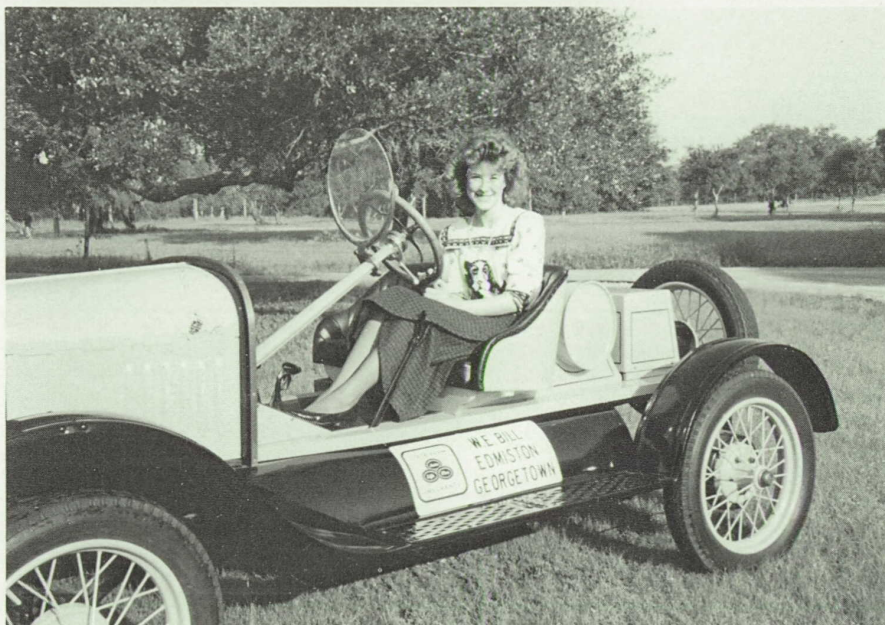

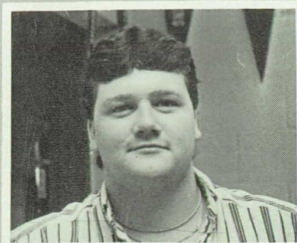

The Science Club combined with the Computer Club to give students a wider range of interests and possibilities. Members raffled concert tickets, toured the U.T. engineering department and nuclear reactor, went to the Science and Technology Fair and laser show, took a Wilderness trip, and participated in the May Fair.

Q: The new GHS policy requires that all students go to AEP for three days on the fifth tardy. How do you feel about this?

Kelly Krause: I think it's sorry, because tardies cannot always be helped, and AEP is too strict a punishment.

Jeff Cardwell: I don't like it. Just because you're tardy, doesn't mean you should have to go to AEP, and you can't always help being tardy.

Congratulations Ericka!

See Mary read. Read Mary read.

"I'll read anything I can get my hands on except for westerns," Merit Scholarship winner Mary McEachron said. "I love to read romances and horror books, but anything will do."

Though her reading helped her on the vocabulary sections of the SAT, she also practiced in other ways for the test.

"I took one practice test and reviewed some formulas for the math part," Mary said.

Mary joined Matt Thomas and Chip Yamka as winners in the national contest, based on SAT scores. Laura Kleen was a semifinalist and Malissa Endsley and Mike Penniman were commended by the committee for their scores.

Although she said she did not believe the SAT really tested one's learning, Laura offered some advice for future test takers.

"Don't cram, don't stay up late the night before, and relax," she said.

Matt said he did not make any special preparations for the test.

"I went to Homecoming the night before, so I didn't get much sleep," he said.

Matt offered advice for people taking college entrance exams.

"Relax," he said. "Try to forget that how you do on the test will affect the rest of your life."

Matt planned to attend Texas A&M to study mechanical or aerospace engineering, and believed that he received a well-rounded education at GHS.

"Some of the high quality teachers here could teach even better if they had more freedom to do what they want," he said.

Many other students were recognized for their academic and athletic contributions.

The Jack Frost Citizenship Committee selected two students per month on the basis of their contributions to the school and the community.

The Optimist Club selected JoLisa Hoover's essay entry as the local best, and selected Young Texans and Texannes each month based on grade averages.

The Rotary Club gave jackets to the top senior scholars.

LET THE Good Times Roll

As the year rolled to an end, the good times continued, but it was a time for reflection as well.

We continued our excellent academic and extracurricular programs with both individual and group standouts in each area.

Traditions in school and social life were upheld and updated and provided immediate gratification and lasting memories.

The future held inevitable good times as well, but they could not have been the same without the times of one special year in the lives of those involved. The memories of 1988 will always roll.

The good times rolled with help from many very special people.

"Let the Good Times Roll" was printed by the Jostens Publishing Company of Topeka, Kansas. As the first camera ready Aerie, the book used a Pagemaker Program, Macintosh computer, and laser printer. The 100 copies contained 234 pages printed on number 80 weight enamel paper. Ten point and twelve point Times were the predominant body copy types.

Cover graphics were designed by the staff and drawn by Jennifer Zeplin, who also did other fine artwork.

Special thanks to Mr. Donald Haynes, who allowed us to rent computer equipment, and taught us how to use it, Mr. Frank Oman, our Jostens representative, and to the Photojournalism students for their copy and photographs. Class pictures were taken by George Gideon and Associates of Delmar Studios of Temple, Texas.

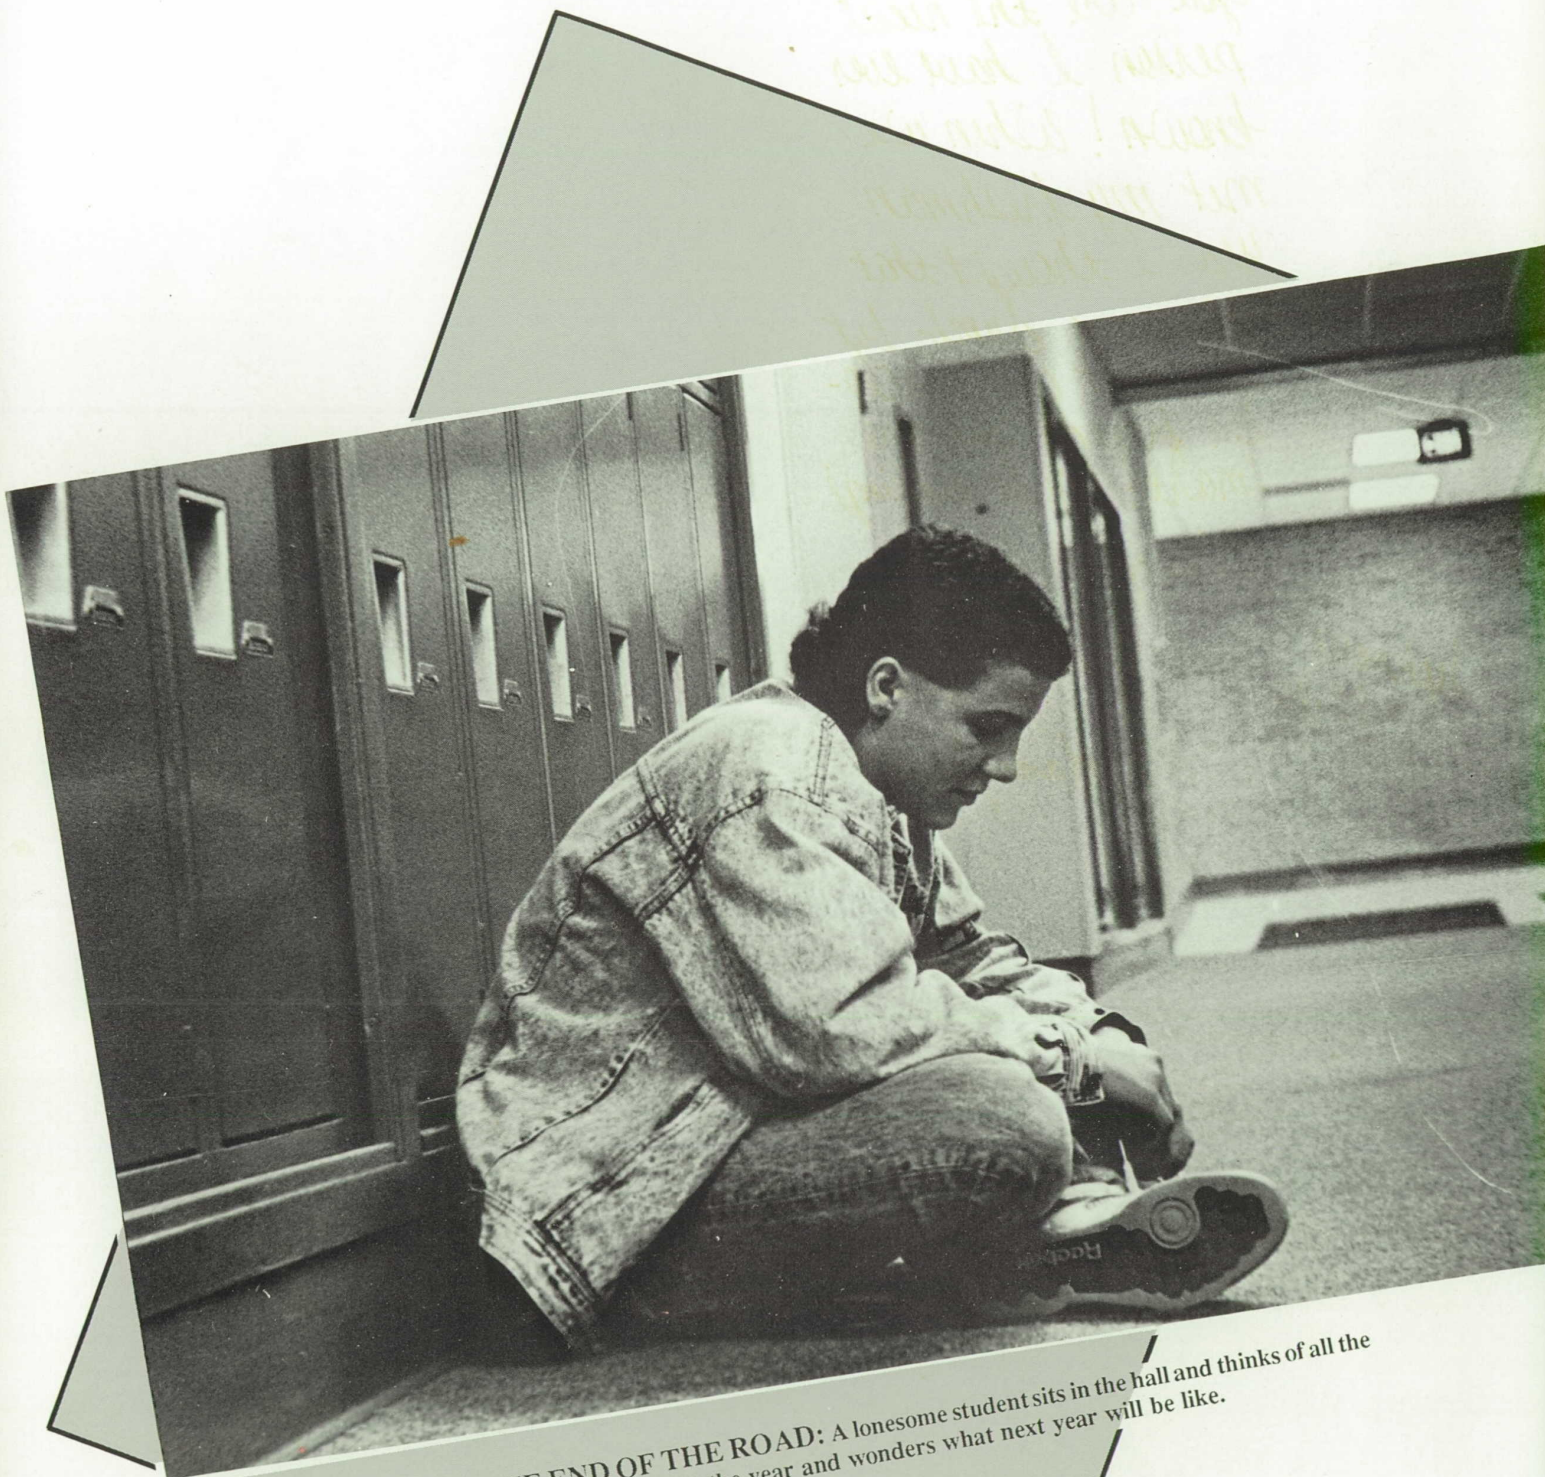

TIME TO CELEBRATE: Seniors tossed mortar boards into the air after the conclusion of the ceremonies. Most seniors attended the Parents for Pride chemical free party at St. Helen's Church immediately following graduation.

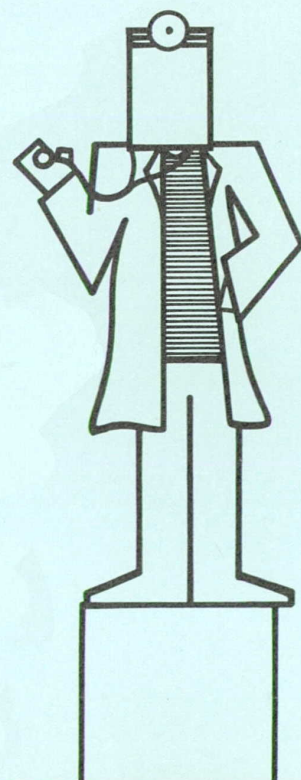

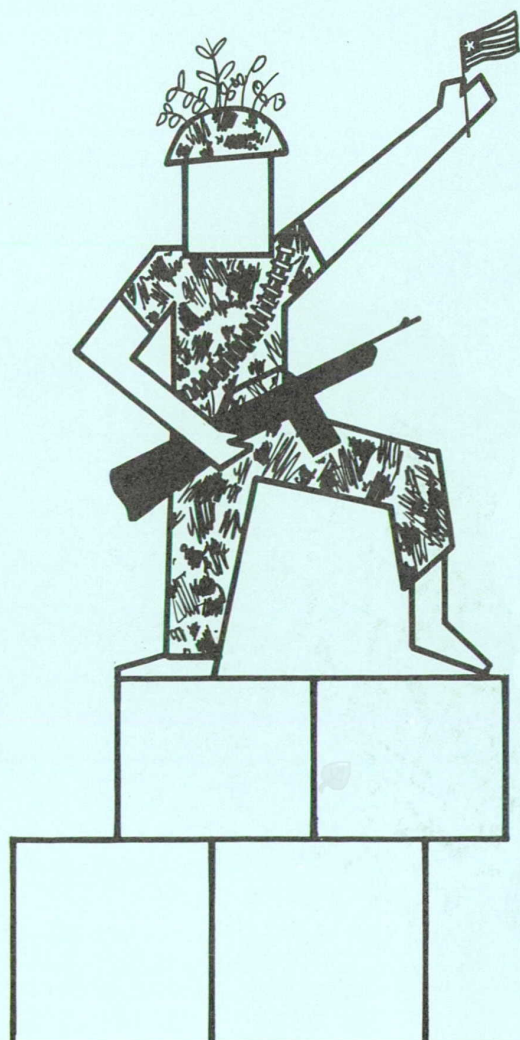

APPLAUSE: Seniors show their enthusiasm on graduation night.

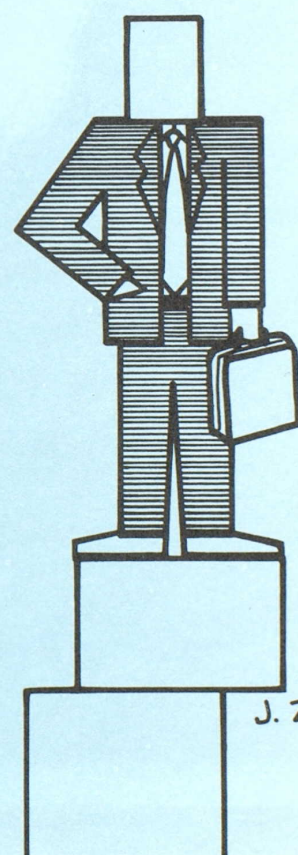

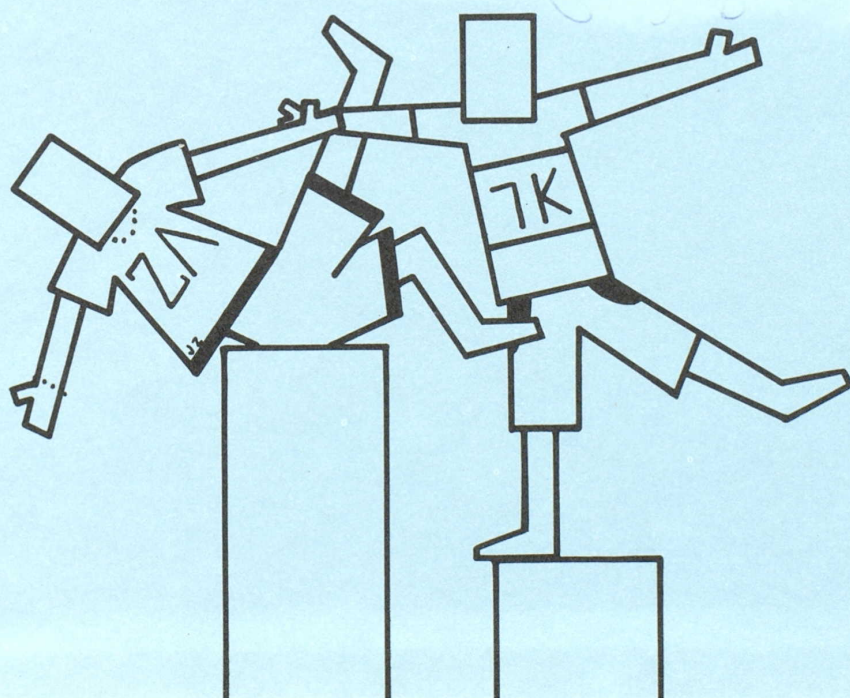

EAGER TO GRADUATE: Craig Brooks and Mercy Bryant listen intently as they wait for their names to be called.

THE END OF THE ROAD: A lonesome student sits in the hall and thinks of all the activities throughout the year and wonders what next year will be like.
